What I Know About Calves.

In these days of telling each other what one, for the best of reasons The plain a tenant at will; hence he is often compelled to live under the same roof with the pig and the cow. Pat once said to me that a cow should never see her calf. Why so? If she sees it and licks, and it is allowed to suck, it is then harder to learn it to drink. The mother becomes attached to it, and when taken away, she mourus for a long time, during which she refuses to give down her milk, which is feverished and unfit for use. This seem ed so very reasonable that I decided to adopt the plan. One trial convinced me Dress Making. that it is the true plan to save the trouble of weaning calves and to keep the mother quiet and in good condition after dropping her calf. When the cow drops the calf, throw a cloth over it and carry it away out of her sight and hearing. She will then not know she had a calf. Milk the cow and offer the milk to the calf, and it will drink at once, simply because it does not have to unlearn the habit of suck ing If a calf should drop in the night, then remove it as quick as possible in the morning, out of sight, and treat as directed-tying up the calf and feeding it Main st., Stroudsburg, Pa. three times a day, is better than twice, as all young animals require food often I ever after adopted Paddy's plan while
