

A Phantom Train.

The Columbia Courier is responsible for the following: The "débâtil" or a big rampage" along the Pennsylvania Railroad. He is seen at various places along the road, and in different shapes. One night last week, after the Philadelphia express left Tyrone station, his satanic majesty got on the engine with Sol Hofmaster. He looked around for a moment, then taking the poker from the fireman, opened the fire door and stirred the fire, at the same time sticking his feet in. He then sat down, stretching out his immense legs and bringing his tail around laid it between his cloven hoofs. Sometimes wings could be seen about his shoulders. He was very particular about the fire; sometimes he would put his head in the fire box and look around, then throw in his tail, stirring the fire at a rapid rate. By this time he had got warmed up, and he had the engineer and fireman, who were nearly scared to death. The engine was making about thirty five miles an hour when the devil picked up the oil can, went out and oiled the locomotive in all its parts. He then returned, and requested Mr. Hofmaster to slack up and set him off at bridge No. 5; Mr. H. told him he might get off the same way he got on. The engine was then running at a fearful rate of speed, and Mr. Devil stepped to one side and disappeared. We learn since that a phantom train was seen in the vicinity of the Gap. Some nights ago, David Wayne, engineer of #47, had stopped for some purpose when a train was heard approaching at a rapid rate. Knowing there was no train due at that hour, schedules were examined carefully, but the stranger could not be made out. At length it came thundering around the curve with an immense head light and other equipments. The conductor, H. Bell, engineer, fireman and brakemen all saw and heard the train coming. The flag man, John K. Newell, immediately went back with a light and placed signal caps about the rails. The phantom train came, making the usual noise, and lighting up the whole track with its huge lurid glare, when in a twinkling the whole thing disappeared. Some say it was old Amos Clemson's train—the notorious leader of the Gap gang, who died several years ago—and that he was aboard swinging a red light furiously.

John Filber, engineer of the Lancaster train, informs us that when approaching Peques bridge, some nights ago, he saw the devil on the cow catcher of his engine. He was running at the rate of thirty miles an hour. He quickly shut off the steam and slackened up, but could not see any thing more of the strange object. These stories are creating a great deal of comment among railroad men. We give them as told to us and leave the readers to draw their own conclusions.

An editor whose subscribers were remiss in payment, lately published the following announcement in his paper: "To save our readers the trouble of sending their subscription by post, and to relieve two unfortunate, we will send to each of our debtors, in the course of a few days, two collectors, one of whom has hardly recovered from the small-pox, and the other has just taken the itch. The delinquents did not wait to be called on, but paid their dues promptly."

People in general have no conception of the number of deaths and injuries produced in the coal mines of Pennsylvania. Last year 272 men were killed outright and 622 injured, and it was not very good year for accidents, either. At least five-sixths of these calamities are the result of negligence, and could have been averted by ordinary precautions.

When Gen. Grant became President, a $100 United States bond was worth $82.72 in gold; it is now worth $101 in gold.

THE SECRET ERRORS OF YOUTH.

Which are hurrying so many thousands of the bright and promising youth of both sexes to early and unhonored graves, are but the outcroppings of a diseased imagination. Indisposition to exertion, loss of power, loss of memory, difficulty of breathing, weak nerves, trembling, horror of disease, dimness of vision, pain in the back, hot hands, flushing of the body, dryness of the skin, pallid countenance and a universal lassitude of the muscular system, are among the most frequent symptoms.
