

HENRY N. SMITH, OF WALL STREET.

Story of a Pennsylvania Shoemaker who did not Stick to his Last.

The following account of a Tioga county shoemaker is from a New York correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial: Henry N. Smith is known throughout the country as one of the most desperate and successful operators in Wall street. It was he who became so noted in the Black Friday time as the head of the firm of Smith, Gould & Martin, it was he who was in with Fisk in the bold operations against the Erie Railroad, and it was he who made a corner on greenbacks last winter by carrying five millions of dollars in greenbacks on his person and locking them up in the Tenth National Bank, which last operation became the subject of Congressional inquiry. Smith came out to Washington and was examined.—The committee did not get much comfort out of his answers. They asked him if he had locked up five millions of dollars in greenbacks. He frankly said he had. They asked him why he did it. He freely acknowledged that he did it to make money by the operation, and wanted to know what the committee intended to do about it. Without answering, the members of the committee asked what right he had to lock up that amount of money. Then he got angry, and told them that it was none of their business; that the money was his own and he could do with it as he liked; and it was about this time that the committee found they had made a mistake. Smith collected about fifty dollars as witness fees and returned to New York, and that was the last of the investigation. A gentleman who was also a witness before the committee said, subsequently, that Smith actually carried the $5,000,000 on his person for two days. The lining of his overcoat was filled with pockets, and into these the money was stowed.

Smith is about thirty-five or thirty six years of age, short of stature, slight of frame, and has red hair. The latter he wears cut close, and his whiskers a la militaire, or mutton chop, with mustache. His name is not Henry M. Smith, nor Henry N. Smith, but Norman Henry Smith. He is a native of Tioga, Pa., a little village which is shut in with charming grace from the outside world by a circle of hills, which in fall presents an unchanging appearance that clings to one's memory forever. In that pretty little village this monster operator was born, and here he is called to this day plain Tom Smith, a nickname he got when a baby. It is nothing against Tom that he spent his young days about as other village boys do, and it is nothing against him that he learned the shoe maker's trade, and was an excellent workman. It is said there that Tom Smith can make the best fine boot of any man in America.

A love scrape, if I am correctly informed, drove him from his hammer and lap stone, and took him to Buffalo a year or two before the war. While there he attended a course of instruction in one of the Business Colleges which were so common then. From this he operated in Buffalo in a small way, going finally to Albany. He could not long remain in such a place, and he turned his eyes toward New York.

His career as a money maker is with out parallel in history. It would be idle to estimate his wealth, for to day it might be twenty millions, and to morrow ten.—He is called the successor of Jim Fisk, but that is an insult to him. He possesses the same reckless daring, but he brought to his experience a keener and more deliberate judgment and intelligence than Fisk had.

Besides, he has none of the "fast" qualities which Fisk possessed. He has no desire to display his wealth ostentatiously; he does not care to build an opera house that he may have the privilege of the green room, and is not likely to run a line of steamers merely to show himself in an admiral's uniform, nor to show himself at the head of a regiment at a cost of thousands of dollars. He lives as he comes a very wealthy man, and owns a number of the best horses that money can buy merely for his own driving. He has considerable money invested in real estate in his native town, where he has provided handsomely for his father and mother.

A Rochester boy teased his girl for an hour to go out and take a lunch with him, and she at last consented. Though not a bit hungry in the least, she managed to get away with a stew, a plate of raw, a white fish, an Irondequoit trout, two quail on toast, a glass of sherry and a half pound of caramels. Her escort left for Denver the next day.

A merchant in a Connecticut village recently kissed the hired girl while his wife was looking in through the window. "It is thought that he will be out again by next Thanksgiving," is the comment made by the local paper that reported the case.
