Advice to the Girls.

We have charity for fast girls. We have often found them generous and warm hearted, and are fully reay to believe that their disreagard for conven tionalies is often the boldness of innocence. For example, in some families the cham ber of the sister is the resort of the bro ther in the first place; then the cousin who is almost a brother, and then of the brother's intimate friend, who is treated style of living is transferred from the and free thinking-for a style of judg ment that often does the yound girl great injustice.

We have said that out Americans had their faults. The want of conventional limits of propriety between the sexes is one of them. The young French girl is were found in a sleigh, dead. kept secluded, and never suffered to see a gentleman unwatched.
