James Thompson and John M. Read are names that will always be intimately blended with the history of jurisprudence in Pennsylvania-names to which property and life within her borders owe some of their best guarantees, and the law is indebted for some of its strongest safeguards. It is a common observation, that nothing so soon reveals the character of a man as to invest him with power and authority. Judges Thompson and Read occupied positions of power and authority from early youth to a ripe old age, and died without a stain upon their character. What nobler epitaph could embalm their memory?
