

The Sultan of Turkey employs in his palace 6,000 servants of both sexes. He pays and feeds 300 cooks, 300 gardeners, 600 coachmen, and 600 persons to do odds and ends about the house. To feed these people and their hangers-on, 1,200 sheep and 2,000 fowls are killed every day, and 100,000 francs are expended for lights. No wonder they call him the Sick Man of Europe.

At last accounts, the Governor had not signed the new license law, owing to illness, not having been able to visit his office since the law was placed in his hands. It seems to us that, according to Sec. 5 of Article 3 of the new Constitution, this law will not stand fire. That section reads thus: "No bill, except general appropriation bills, shall be passed containing more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in its title." This new bill contained, 1st, the repeal of the local option law; and 2d a license law. This seems very much like two subjects, and we presume a proper Court would so decide. Should this be a correct view, the Governor's signature will be withheld, and the local option law will remain in force.

Eleven years ago Mr. Chauncey Lewis, of Union, Erie county, lost his pocket book containing thirteen hundred dollars in notes and currency. Two years afterward he received a letter enclosing him the notes and securities amounting to nearly one thousand dollars. Last week Father Lonergan, of Corry, sent for him and handed him three hundred and sixty dollars in currency, the same identical money that was in the pocket book at the time he lost it. The pocket book had been picked up by a man in his employ, a Catholic, whom he did not suspect of dishonesty, and for eleven years the happy thief wrestled with his uneasy conscience, until he could keep his guilty secret no longer and confessed it to Father Lonergan.

Compulsory education is being enforced in New York city with gratifying vigor and good results. A census of children not in attendance upon school is employing sixty policemen, who will report by the middle of April. Meanwhile the truant agents are patrolling the streets for stray scholars. It is a note-worthy fact that so far no compulsion, properly so-called, has had to be used. Persuasion has proved sufficient. In many cases it has been only lack of decent clothing which kept children away. When this was supplied they have gone joyfully. As yet the news-boys, boot-blacks and factory operatives have not been approached. The hardest work will have to be done among them. While New York is thus doing her best to insure an educated citizenry, the Bourbon Senate of Ohio, afraid of universal intelligence and Democratic defeat, votes down compulsory education.

Not long ago General Terry, of the United States Army, detailed a portion of the officers of his command to make a full and accurate canvass of the destitute people of those portions of Minnesota which have suffered by the grasshoppers during last summer. By that report it appears that there are 9,154 persons entirely destitute. Of the number 4,917 are over twelve years of age. For the relief of this special class of persons $300,000 has been set apart by the Government. This sum will be expended in the purchase of pork, flour and other provisions. These will be furnished by the United States Commissary at cost prices, an advantage of great consequence to the poor sufferers. In Dakota six thousand people have been killed. These are destitute of food and clothing. Both of these articles will be given them under the supervision of the military authorities of that Territory. Steel-grain of all kind suitable to that section of the country devastated by the grasshoppers last year is much needed. In a short time spring crops will have to be put in the ground. If that is omitted the people must be fed next year as well as this. There will be no harvests to fill the granaries and afford subsistence to men, women and children who are starving. While therefore food and clothing is being given to the people of the stricken portions of the Northwest, at the same time means should be put into their hands to raise crops during the present year. In that way substantial relief can be afforded to all classes.

A case of a nature quite rare in the courts, but involving a principle of considerable importance, has just been decided by the New York Supreme Court, and is reported at length in the Times. The suit was brought in equity by a young married woman to have her inchoate right of dower in property valued at $150,000, protected by the court. The property had been conveyed by her husband to his two grown up daughters, children of a former wife, four days before plaintiff's marriage with him, and without her knowledge or consent, the consideration being natural affection of the grantor for the grantees. This act of the husband was claimed to have been in fraud of his wife's inchoate right of dower, and the court was asked for a decree declaring the conveyance void so far as it affected such right. This was granted, the court holding that a man cannot woe a woman with his wealth, and then defraud her of the enjoyment of it by conveying away his property on the eve of their marriage. The decision is of special interest to women.

The Baltimore American notes the recent death in that city of a man whose economical habits entitle him to a lofty niche in the world's gallery of misers. His name was Henry Breamer, and shortly before his death he announced to a friend that during his whole life he had never given away a cent, nor spent one when it was not absolutely necessary. Some four years ago he married a third wife, who is a young woman, but unlike most men in their dotage had held her well in hand and compelled her to work in a factory. Her weekly earnings were regularly turned over to Breamer, who attended personally to all household matters and bought the food they lived upon. About six years ago he brought a second-hand pine coffin case from an undertaker, and that piece of furniture was stored away in the upper part of the house until it should come into use. A few days before dying he told his wife that his funeral expenses must not exceed $10, and he decided that his mortal remains could be carried to the graveyard by two or three men much cheaper than they could be in a hearse. On making inquiry it was found that it would cost about $12 to employ six men to convey the miser's body to the grave, and rather than pay that sum a wagon was hired for $5 to do the job. The night previous to his death Breamer sent for a barber and was shaved, as that operation would have cost $1 if postponed until after death, while before it cost but ten cents. The funeral procession consisted of the furniture wagon containing the remains, and eleven friends and relatives of the deceased, who followed along on foot. The faithful wife of the dead man carried out his instructions to a letter, and the total expenses attending the funeral amounted to $8 75. Breamer had during his life managed, by quiet economy and abstinence, to scrape together a considerable amount of wealth, estimated at $30,000. He made a will leaving the property to his son in Indiana and his wife, but cautioned them to save it carefully.

Number of Eggs in a Hen.
A curious point of inquiry among zoologists has been, for a long time, how many eggs there are in the ovary of a hen? To determine this, a German naturalist, a short time since, instituted some careful investigations, the result of which showed the ovary of a hen to contain about 600 embryo eggs. He also found that some twenty of these are matured the first year about 120 during the second year, 135 during the third, 114 during the fourth, and during the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth years the number decreases by twenty annually, it consequently following that after the fourth, or at most the fifth year, hens are no longer profitable as layers, unless it may be in exceptional instances.

Mr. Jackson S. Schultz on Tanning Leather.
Hon. Jackson S. Schultz, the well known leather man, in an address before the Tanners' Meeting at Rutland, Vt., used the following language:
The difference between French leather and American may be briefly stated. They leave all the stretch in a skin, we get it out by hard work. This is the highest style known to us, and is all wrong. The better done it is the worse it is. The French skin is elastic and yields to every inequality of the foot, the American will not, it is just like a stovepipe. The shoemaker never has any trouble in suiting a customer with French stock, while with American he has many misfits. In some respects the American is the best. It will turn water better, but that is not what the people want. They demand a soft and elastic leather and why not give it to them? Can you not do it? Yes, perfectly well; the only trouble is in the color. To accomplish this it should be light. To accomplish this apply only cold water to your bark. If you do this the leather will be light. Then to give the finishing touch use a bath of sumac for two or three hours, and you will have a fine yellow tint that is all that can be desired and it will remain so. It is a natural color and not open to the objection of those produced by chemicals.

Though behind the European nations in the finer kinds of lighter leathers, we are ahead of many of them in the heavier and lower grades. After visiting the Vienna Exposition the Emperor of Russia issued an edict that the Russian tanners should double tan their leather. The superiority of the English and American harness and military equipments was evident. They will pay a great deal more attention to a military boot than to a gentleman's boot or a lady's shoe. The ordinary leather of Europe is much inferior to ours, it is not half tanned. I have actually smelled gentlemen's boots in Austria, like a dead rat, and the soles will not wear even, but squeeze out at the sides. We are introducing our sole leather. They like something that will wear even and all the way through. The secret of the Russia leather is not in the tanning, but in the preparation that is applied to it afterward. When Marshall Jewell was the minister there he got into the good graces of the Emperor and obtained five barrels of it, which he sent home.

Big Duck Shooting.
From Lancaster Intelligence, Saturday.
Walter Fryberger, of Marietta, in about a day and a half shot fifty-four wild ducks of different varieties, and three wild geese. William Nixon also shot, nine ducks and one goose in a short time. The river is now filled with ducks, and large numbers of geese are passing constantly.

What States Should Not Do.
States should never attempt to build and run canals or railroads. Pennsylvania tried it and after running up a debt of nearly fifteen millions, made its best speculation by selling off the public works at half their cost. New York State held on to its canals and has lost millions of dollars annually, while recently frauds have been brought to light, that will compel a sale of their works unless the people of that State desire to be taxed to death for the benefit of political swindlers.

RISEN FROM THE DEAD.
A Singular Story From Maine of a Temporary Return to Life.

The Augusta (Me.) Journal of Friday, 19th inst., tells this marvelous tale: "We have an event to chronicle that would scarcely be believed were it not authoritatively vouched for by competent witnesses, parties whose testimony cannot well be disputed or set aside. A young man in the town of Vassalboro, in this county, was suffering in the last stages of consumption, the disease which had insidiously and stealthily brought him to the verge of the grave. For several weeks he had been entirely prostrate and unable to speak, even a articulate a syllable. He became so oppressed for breath that he compelled his attendants to raise the windows in his room, put out the fires and resort to every means to obtain fresh air. One day last week (Thursday, we understand,) the young man died. Friendly hands prepared the poor emaciated body for burial; but just as the attending friends were arranging the remains for the casket, there appeared unmistakable evidence of returning life in what had seemed to them an inanimate mass of clay. The car of an attendant was bent down to the side of the dead man, and it was discovered that the heart had begun again its slow and measured palpitations, the pulse throbbed, and the young man arose from the death shrouds, opened his mouth, and spoke in clear and distinct words to those who stood appalled in the death chamber. There was no huskiness in his voice; he appeared lively and active, said he felt not the slightest pain, but to use his own language, 'I feel just as well as I ever did.' At his request the neighbors were all called in, who crowded the house for hours, declaring that the recovery of the man was equal to any miracle recorded in the Scriptures. He told this startled assemblage of his friends and neighbors that, as he died, all things seemed dark, but only for an instant; his eyes suddenly opened to a new world, the real Heaven which had been so many times in his thoughts and had given him so much comfort in his last weeks of pain and sorrow. He stood upon an eminence which overlooked a vast and beautiful plain; the magnificent plain stretched further than his enlarged vision could penetrate, and he described it in language which, to his mortal auditors, seemed extravagant in the extreme. But the revived life of the young man was not to continue long. Before night he again resigned himself to death. The body was kept a reasonable length of time, and buried on Sunday last, the funeral being largely attended. We have written out the particulars of this remarkable event substantially as we have heard them, allowing our intelligent readers the privilege of drawing their own inferences."
