A new epidemic prevails among the horses of Philadelphia, called by veterinary surgeons "aptha gartica," or eruptive fever. It is even more contagious than the epizooty, and if not arrested at once it will prove fatal. It is described as follows: The first symptoms of the disease are noticed by a peculiar expression of the countenance, saliva flowing from the mouths, and moisture exuding from the eyes. In some cases it is accompanied with troubled breathing and considerable fever. Upon opening the mouth of an animal stricken with this malady will be found small vesicles on the edge and upper portions of the tongue and gums. On the third or fourth day's illness large patches of the covering of the tongue drop off and the animal refuses food. The disease, as in other eruptive fevers, whether in man or beast, runs a fixed course, and the eruption cannot safely be arrested unless proper remedies are immediately applied, together with good nursing, which adds materially to the speedy recovery of the animal, which may be effected in from six to ten days.

The Titusville Courier is authority for the statement that Boss Tweed is hidden away in the wilds of Forest county; that one of the Boss' friends owns a large tract of land in that county; that a man strongly resembling Tweed left a train at Irvington, accompanied by six men; that they crossed the river, purchased a team, loaded on their luggage and started in the direction of Forest county; that the Great Escaped has been traced into that part of Pennsylvania, and that two detectives are now in Tionesta seeking him. Comundrum from the Scranton Republican: By the way, what has become of the Legislative Treasury Investigating Committee, that was so very active just previous to the late election? Have the committee looked into the affairs of the Treasury so as to cover the administrations of McGrath, Irwin, Kemble and Mackey, as required by the action of the House of Representatives? We fear the committee have not done their duty in the premises. They went to work crab fashion and seem to have progressed no further than Mr. Mackey's administration. Shall we not hear from that glorious committee again, now that the election has passed by?

Quite a sad affair took place in East Stroudsburg last week. A little over a week ago, Mrs. Sarah, wife of Lewis Felener, was stricken down with Diphtheria in its worst form, and for some time her life was almost despaired of. Dr. Mutchler having been called in, rendered every possible aid and finally succeeded in conquering the disease, in the mean while both of their only children were taken with the Scarlet fever, and notwithstanding the fact that the Doctor being there to fight the disease, the first one died on Thursday and the other on Saturday. Thus they have been suddenly left childless and the mother still prostrate. All sympathize with this family in their deep affliction and berave ment. Dr. Mutchler was untiring in his attention and we believe no one could have done more to relieve and to save them. They were both buried in one coffin. Interment at Cherry Valley, last Sunday.

Next in importance to the President's message is the report of the Secretary of the Treasury. Mr. Bristow is clear and straightforward in representing the state of our national finances. He shows that for the current year, ending June 30, 1876, we are likely to run about $3,250,000 behind the public expenditures. The receipts from customs have fallen off nearly six millions from the preceding year, while the internal revenue is some eight millions greater. The deficit is caused by our spending more. The only way to get the payments inside of the receipts is to cut down the estimates and appropriations, and this can be done if Congress will carry out the economy which its members are constantly preaching. Mr. Bristow, like the President, sustains the act for the resumption of specie payments in 1879. He regards that law as a pledge to holders of legal-tender notes which cannot now be broken. He does not think that coin enough can be accumulated in time, nor that such an effort would be advisable. He would prefer to fund the greenback notes in long bonds, bearing 4 per cent. interest, at the rate of $2,000,000 per month, which would in three years reduce their volume enough to bring what are left up to their face value. He thinks that the notes would be offered in exchange for these notes, because the average rate for call loans in New York for the past year has been only 3 per cent., and these bonds would of course be negotiable for currency at any time. The Secretary also recommends the restoration of the duty on tea and coffee, the removal of which has been a great loss to the revenue without any reduction of prices to consumers. He says, in regard to the prosecution of the whiskey frauds, that he proposes to follow them up wherever discovered, but he thinks them not surprising when the tax on spirits amounts to three times the first cost of the article. Mr. Bristow is a good and faithful public officer.

The Union soldiers of this country will not fail to stow away in their minds a recollection of the fact that the Democratic House of Representatives, by a strict party vote, 169 to 106, refused to pass a resolution in favor of the employment of Union soldiers in subordinate positions in the gift of the House. The only soldiers who can get office from this House are those who fought on the rebel side.
