In oder to facilitate matters warrants were stained from Magistrate Carpenter for the arrest of the erooked Philadelphian, and late in the afternoon Assistant Chief Bensin accompained by Detective, Wood paid a most unexpected visit to the South Third street office, and unceremoniously "collared" Rudolph Winaus, a brother of George of the "lathe work" of bonds, a battery, and other evidences were secured. Among the articles obtained were half a dozen productions of old engravings so perfect in very particular that had it not been for a ifference in the paper experts could not have separated the copies from the originals. Randolph Winans protested his innocene of all charges in regard to counterfeiting, and mid that though his art was a secret, he had only used it in the reproduction of engarage. The process, he said, consisted of first making a peculiar composition, which is for a few moments of the consistency of jaste. On this the engraving to be reproduced is immediately placed, when an exact impression is made. The plate quickly audens. It is then electrotyped and ready for printing any number of fac-similes of the original. Winans admitted that bonds could be so perfectly reproduced that the wites would dely the scrutiny of an expert, but this, he added, to his knowledge had not been done. He further stated that greenbacks could not be copied, as they, unite the bonds, are subjected to such severe hydraulic pressure after being printed that not even the courser lines would leave an impression. The prisoner, however, laid to secount for the presence of electrotypes of the "lathe work" on United Sizes bonds, and it is needless to say his puestations' of innonce were accepted can grano salis (with some allowance). Both he and Allen were locked up to await Wher developments. About an hour later Mr. Benson received despatches from Scranto and Portland advising him of the arrest of George Wicans and Wintermute, the deterive at the first named place adding that be had secured a $500 counterfeit bond, steral composition plates, battery, a number of impressions, and other evidences. The two prisoners from the country were y last night and the "crook; quartette will probably have a hearing tobefore the United States Commissioner. This is regarded as by far the most importat "land" yet made, for the process is such a dangerous imitation that a few months' day would have been sufficient to have fooded not only this country, but the whole cirlized world with spurious, so perfectly reproduced from the originals that detectoo would have been almost impossible. It should also be remembered that, had not
