dience. What a different view has been opened to us of the state of nations of by-gone ages, from that which has been presented to us by other historians. No wonder that the numbers already issued, have met with a large sale, and been hailed by frequent laudatory notices of the press, of which a few abridged extracts here are subjoined.

[From the Democratic Review.]

This beautiful octavo-the first volume of Dr. Hebbe's Universal History-forms the initial volume of a new and greatly improved work, devoted to the history of the Universe, based not merely upon the usually received data of former historians but derived from the best authorities, attested by revelations of modern discovery. The recent re-searches in archicology by Chevalier Bunsen, and other learned investigators, among ancient monu mental records, have so entirely change the aspect of primitive times and revealed so many important new data, that the wonder has been not that such a work as the present should make its appearance but rather that the task should not have been before attempted in Europe. From a somewhat careful examination of this volume, however we find no cause to regret that the theme should have School Director of Rush tshp. vs William H. Kase Daniel P.
