There is everything in London to admire its populousness, its wealth, its gorgeousness its dazzling splendor; but there is the other extreme, and you cannot walk a rod, especially at this season, without meeting objects which fill you with anguish, and make you wonder how human beings can live under such wretchedness and destitution. Here, in the midst of plenty, men, and women and children are dying of absolute starvation; and when you see these poor shivering, hungry creatures looking into the window of a cook shop, redolent with every savory perfume, and crowded with viands, cooked and uncooked, of every description to tempt and pamper the Epicurean appetite, you are amazed that a thin, transparent plate of glass keeps them back from an actual enslaught. Whether any can by human ingenuity be invented or found, is too difficult a problem for me to solve. The tide of human life here that rolls along the great streets is beyond all description; where they all come from, where they are going to, how half of them are fed, how half of them are lodged is in, conceivable. . Eight times out of nine, the Times publishes a supplement, and very frequently two supplements, almost exclusively devoted to advertisements. The charge for advertising is always considerable though there is included a heavy duty to the government. Each column of advertisements. after the duty to the government is deducted may be expected to pay at least twelve pounds sterling, or say sixty dollars. Now, in count ing the columns in the Times, with its two supplements, which lay before me, I find seventy-six columns of advertisements. This would be £912, or $4560 for the advertisements in this single paper; now, two-thirds of this sum, say for three hundred days would be $912,000. Add to this, the proceeds of twenty-five thousand papers sold, after allowing the government tax, which would be $1750 per day, and would be, by the year, $545,000, making total of the recelpts for a single newspaper establishment, of $1,458,000. What do you say to this ? . . With one single gross exception, the streets in Paris are as clean as in London the public conveyances much better; their drivers are better dressed, and the coitures and carriages much cleaner. The driver being always required to give you his number on a card when you enter, and the table of fares being posted up in the carriage, you are secure against imposition. The omnibuses are so wide that you can get in and out withont crowding your neighbors, and there is an iron bar or strap overhead to steady your passage,- besides they are always lighted at night. The streets are more quiet than in London. None of those unfortunate creatures. who infest the streets of London, by night and by day, are ever suffered to show themselves before candle lighting; they are not permitted, under the severest penalties, to speak to any person without encouragement, and are at once taken to prison, if they are found in the streets after eleven o'clock. . . I was presented with a ticket a few nights since, for the opera, to see and hear Jenny Lind. Parts of her singing, or heard better executed by others; but, as a the Susquehanna. whole, I have never heard her equal, or About 50 acres are cleared. The rest well scarcely any one comparable to her. I have wooded some good timber. scarcely any one comparable to her. I have never known such extraordinary compass of voice, such facility of execution, such flexibility, such beauty and melody of articulation and accent. It is something of a contrast, however, to find people paving two gineas, that is then, and sometimes fifteen, and sometimes twenty dollars, for a single the sidewalks all night.

SEEKING GOLD ON THE RIO GILA .- A COTrespondent of the New Orleans Delta writing from Chihoahua, North Mexico, says:-

Chihushus, we find to be a place of much more importance than any place we have yet passed through. Many American merchants are concentrated here. There are not less than 250 Americans here, now en route for California, or the "Gold Diggins" wherever they can find them. It is asserted here, and from pretty good authority, that the Rio Gila abounds in gold diest-where most appear to be steering their course. Several parties have left here for the Rio Gila, one of which is the one to which Dr. G. M. Wozencraft belonged. A large party is forming here to proceed to California with wagons. We are informed that a Mexican went to the Rio Gila, and came back in three months with $30,000 worth of gold dust. We expect it will consume about forty days to travel to RESTRAINT ON MARRIAGE.—The Supreme Court of this State has decided that a testator can devise real estate to his widow upon condition that she shall not marry again .-In the Common Pleas of Lancaster county, such condition was held to be void upon the principal that contracts in restraint of marraige are not favored by the law. But the Supreme Court has settled the question another way. Chief Justice Gibson delivered the opinion. Lancaster Union.

To the aged, it will prove a great comfort; to the dyspeptic, and to those who are predisposed to gout or rheumatic affections, it gives great relief; and to the inebriate who wishes to reform, but whose stomach is constantly craving the noxious liquor, it is invaluable—giving tone to the digestive organs, and strength to resist temptation; and is consequently a great agent in the cause of tem-perance. The Rayages of Death. Rev. James Anderson, Rector of Ballinrobe, has addressed a fourth letter to Lord Russel. on the state of the poor in his district. He

"Two aged women, sisters, of Emlagh, more than seven miles from Clifden, being famine-stricken, killed their own dog, boiled it, and then partook of the flesh and soup On the following day one of them died! All this was distinctly deposed on oath before John Dopping, Esq., resident magistrate, by a most creditable person, Austin Malley, who saw with his own eyes a portion of the dog boiling in the pot, and also saw another por-tion laid aside for the next meal! This happened during the last year, as did the following :- At the summer assizes of Galway, a poor man was convicted for having stolen a calf. Twelve months imprisonment was the sentence about being passed upon him by Baron Lefroy, when Mr. Dopping, knowing the dreadful circumstances under which the act was committed, requested permission of his lordship to say a word in behalf of the prisoner. He (Mr Dopping) then informed the Court that four of the poor man's children had died of starvation, that the husband HAIRS, AND PANCY PLANO STOOLS, which are of and the wife had been brought from Kilkerrin to Clifden, upwards of twenty miles; that the wife, on being conveyed from the car to the Bridewell was found to be dead through the exhaustion of famine, and that they had both (a short time before her death) declared that such were the extremities to which they had been reduced, that they had absolutely eaten a portion of the legs of one of their children; that in order to come at the truth if possible; the bodies of the said children were exhamed, and that the appearance of muthation, as stated, was visible. The recital of such a tragedy moved the benevolent Judge himself to tears, and constrained him to a commutation of the sentence to that of some trifling nominal punishment. Let it not be said my lord, that these are bygone tales, because, indeed, they occurred in the past year; for I can with truth assure your lordship that, independently of what I daily witness myself, every one I meet, in every grade of life, has something so mournful to relate that no language can depict the miserable condition of the whole West of Ireland. The police themselves can well attest it, for they are discovering dead bodies among the walls of ruined habitations-or rather hovels-and find the frightful prev of rats and scarecrows. Thus it is, my lord, that the famine progresses; and oh! how awful the prospect for at least two or three months to come !!!

A QUEER HEAD DRESS .- Lynch, in his expedition to the Dead Sea, thus describes a queer head dress, which the which about

It was 14 inches to two feet long, three or four inches wide at the base, and about one inch at the top. It is made of tin, silver or gold, according to the circumstances of the wearer, and it is sometimes studded with precious stones.-From the stimmit depends a veil, which falls upon the breast, and, at will, conceals the the highest rank, and once assumed, it is worn for life. Although the temple may throb and the brain be racked with fever, it cannot be laid aside. Put on with the bridal robe, it does not give place to the shroud. . SULPHURIC ETHER IN CHOLERA, -- Dr. Abper Phelps states, in a communication to the Boston Traveller, that he recently administered sulphuric ether to a cholera patient, with the most beneficial results.
