SELECT POETRY.

THE DREAM OF PILATE'S WIFE.

MATT. XXVII. 19.

BY CHARLES W. BAIRD.

It was not sleep that bound my sight,
Upon that well-remembered night;
But I was not fancy's fitful power
That o'er the vision of my soul.

The mystic future seemed to roll
And in the deep prophetic trance

Revealed its treasures to my glance.

Before my wondering eyes there stood
A vast, a countless multitude;

The hoary sire, the prattling child,
The mother and the maiden mild.

The gladsome youth and man of care—

And all, where'er I turned to see,

In humble silence bent the knee.

Still o'er the crowded scene I gazed:

Against the lurid eastern sky

I saw the shameful cross upraised;

And while the swelled lay,

The myriad voices seemed to say:

And we believe in Him that died;

By Pontius Pilate crucified—

That He shall come, when time is fled;

To judge the living and the dead.

I woke; thou wast not by my side.

I heard the sound of solemn song;

And while I caught the swelling lay,

The myriad voices seemed to say:

And we believe in Him that died;

By Pontius Pilate crucified—

That He shall come, when time is fled;

To judge the living and the dead.

I awoke; thou wast not by my side.

I heard the sound of solemn song;

And while I caught the swelling lay,

The myriad voices seemed to say:

And we believe in Him that died;

By Pontius Pilate crucified—

That He shall come, when time is fled;

To judge the living and the dead.

I awoke; thou wast not by my side.

I heard the sound of solemn song;

And while I caught the swelling lay,
