PHILADELPHIA AND READING RAIL-ROAD, FROM PHILADELPHIA

LOST THE BET .- A good looking and jovial friend of ours, a day or two since, related in our presence the following : At one of our first hotels a stout, red-faced gentlemrn, in a white beaver, blue coat and buff vest, offered to wager a "ten spot" that he could close his eyes, and simply taste name any sort of liquor in the house. The bet was taken, and the process of winning or losing commenced forthwith. "That is genuine Otard," said the fat gentleman, tasting from a wine-glass-"and this is-this is whiskey," and so on through the hotel's "manifest," of hardware. A wag then poured a few drops of pure water into the glass and handed it to the connoisseur-"This is-ah-ah-this is-(tasting again)-by thunder! gentlemen, I lose the bet. I never tasted this liquor before !"- Boston Mail.

ONE OF THE DIGGINGS .- The Albany Argus publishes an extract from Mr. Henry Judson, who went out to California in Col. Stevenson's regiment, and after being honorably discharged at Monterey, left that place with a , party of five others, fellow soldiers, for the mines, well supplied with tools, provisions, a cart, three yoke of cattle, &c., &c., and who went to a place called McCallamy's Diggings. He save :

"We were twenty-one days making the journey here from Monterey; when we built us a log-house, killed our cattle, jerked our bref, and had everything snug and in order in two weeks. We went to work a fortnight ago, and, in this short time, our party have dug over one hundred and eighty pounds of gold-which gives us nearly $8000 piece. I happened to discover the spot from which we dug all this gold-which is the only good luck I ever had. We have nearly six months' provisions left-an advantage when every necessary is so extravagantly high, which you can appreciate. After the rainy season next spring, I shall start for the North and American Forks, where the most gold is found. It is too cold to winter there. I shall do well this winter, and when I do return I shall have a pile."

THE GRASS TREE, which grows in India, from which the fibre is obtained for manufacturing grass cloth, it is thought would flourish equally well in the middle States of this country. One of our missionaries to China, Rev. Mr. MacGowan, writes that he has drawn up for the Agricultural Society of India an account of the article, which may be useful to those who may feel disposed to at tempt its introduction into the United States. The report will probably appear in the tran-sactions of that beciety for 1848-'49.
