TURKEY AND RUSSIA.

There is no later news, in the Europe Times, (the only paper that has come hand) from Constantinople or St Petersburg, and of course, we have got no solution of the difficulty between the Porte and the Autocrat the general belief, however, among well informed circles, is said to be that Russia will pocket the affront rather than provoke a colision with France and England.

Their is a rumor from, that in consequen of the relation in which Louis Napoleon stands with the Czar, he would gladly foregothe support of the nation in behalf of Turkey. correspondent, writing from Belgrade on the inst., states that the Aungarian refugees were still at Widden, ready to set out for the destinations they may receive. They were divided into three camps-an Italian, a Hungarian, and a Polish one. Each camp is under the order of a colonel, and each man receives such daily rations, according to his grade, like the British troops.

Prince Alexander of Servia, had behaved very well towards them, allowing them free passage through his territory, and provisions. Bem, Dembinsky and several others, have not only embraced Islaism, but entered the Turkish army. The Porte is said to have appointed the Isle of Canada as the residence of the Refugee Magyars.

FRANCE.

The deliberations of the National Assembly were almost wholly devoted, on the 12th and 13th ult., to the report of M. Thiers on the Roman question. The report is decidedly conservative, and at variance with the expressed views of the President's letter to M. Ney. The conclusion at which M. Thiers arrives is, that liberal institutions are incompatible with the independence of the Pope as a temporal sovereign, and likewise the independence of the Catholic Church, and the rights of the people are at issue-the latter ought to give way.

It is not believed that the views of M Thiers will be responded to by the French nation, and it is certain that both the matter and style of the report are very unsatisfactory to the President of the Republic.

At a Ministeral Council held subsequently, it was decided that the Government would follow exclusively the policy lad down in the letter of the President on the affairs of Rome the effect of which resolution will be, it is saids to cause M. Falloux and General Rulhieres immediately to retire from the Ministry. No action had taken place on the part of the Assembly, to indicate the views of the majorlty on the report of M. Thiers; but there was a rumor from Paris, on Thursday, that the difficulty between M. Thiers and the President had been satisfactorily adjusted.

commenced its sittings on the 12th, and is at present engaged in trying the persons concerned with the affairs of the 13th July. Several exciting disreputable scenes have pecurred before the Court, and there is reason to apprehend that others will follow.

On the 13th, M. Emile de Girardin was being examined as a witness, when a violent altercation took place between him and the Procureur General, in the course of which M. Girardin declared in open court, that as the constitution having been violated, resistance - wass right and a duty.

At a subsequent stage of the examination the judge forbade M. Girardin to reply to a remark of one of the consel, when all the prisoners rose en masse and demanded, with violent gesticulations, that the witness should be heard. A fearful scene of tumult and confusion ensued, and nearly an hour elapsed before the huissiers could bring the accused and the judge to a state of calmness.

On the day following one of the witnesses, a Lieut. of the gendarmicrie, boasted of having thrust his sabre into the breast of a man who was married, and advanced with his bosom bared, whereupon all the accused rose up and denounced the witness as a coward. One of the counsel declaring that he was not worthy to clean epaulettes. Indescribable confusion ensued, which terminated in the judges seeking safety in flight. They returned, however, in an hour, to say that no notice should be taken of the interruption.

Kuriab then proceeded to Constantinople. Several hundred officers of those furnished with passports from Comorn, have passed through Berlin, on their way to the West. Some of them are going to America. Klapka is said to have been among those refugees, and to have embraced the resolution of crossing the Atlantic with 300 others.

According to Lloud's, Hungary is to be dirided henceforth into tea districts, each to have its own Provincial Governor, yet the Deputies are to be chosen by a majority of the votes of the population.

ROME

Accounts from Rome are the reverse atisfactory. The return of the Pope is still talked about, but when it may take place is still the subject of conjecture. There has been a misunderstanding between one of the Cardinals and M. de Corcelles, and the Frenchman being offended at a letter rethe number of traitors still tolerated in the Eternal City. The point was referred to His Holiness, who disapproved of the Cardinal's enduct and threw him overboard. Garibaldi has left the island of Santa Malilina for Gibraltar, where he will sail for London, pltimately, it is said, to America. ENGLAND.

IRELAND.

The anti-rent conspiracy in Ireland is exending throughout all parts of that ill-fated land. The local journals are filled with accounts of the abduction of crops. There can be no doubt that in the southern and in parts of the northern provinces, there is a general determination on the part of the Peasantry to defrand landlords of their rents to such an extent as would seem calculated to consum mate the rain of the country.

DAME SIDE OF THE QUESTION.—The free gentlemen of color, held a political meeting at Putnam Hall, in the city of New York, last week. They resolved to cast their votes with the party that had the most honesty, and a committee was appointed to ascertain which party was, under the resolution, entitled to their support. After a brief consultation, the commi that there was no honesty in either of the parties. Whereupon it was decided that each might vote as he pleased. One of the principal orators maintained, that honesty was not only not requisite in politics, but that it was essentially necessary for a politician to be dishonest. He (Mr. Guignon,) said he admired the honesty of the last speaker; but when they entered upon the arena of politics they must cast aside all honesty and lay down conscience. General Taylor was not the man for the whigs, if they could better themselves; but he was the man they could best return. Our great misfortune, continued the speaker, is that our moral honesty is too high. It roin us Your moral honesty would never get me along. (Shouts of Loughter.) It appears that on Hickory Run, a stream which empties into the Lehigh, about fire niles below White Haven, there was a large dam, belonging to Mahlon K. Taylor, which covered about 70 acres of ground, when full, and in some places 40 feet deep. During Monday night, in consequence of the heavy rains on that day, this dam filled to overflow ing, (the waste gates having been neglected to be hoisted) and the dam gave way about midnight, aweeping everything before it .-Houses with their sleeping inmates were dashed to atoms, and their inhabitants, without a moment's warning, carried away by house and saw mill were carried away, and not a timber remained together His daughter, who was in the house at the time, was found on Tuesday under a heap of floodwood, dead. Jacob West's wife and four children found dead. He was under a log heap in a state of insensibility. Thomas Crawford and his wife were both found dead. Twenty persons were missing, of whom seven bodies have been found.

Nothing has been heard from below mouth of the creek, and serious apprehensions are entertained for several families living just below in a narrow gorge. They must have perished. As the Lehigh was high at the time, there has been disastrous work along the whole line of the Lehigh Navigation, it is feared.

THE OVERLAND EMIGRANTS.

SUFFERING AND WINTERING AT THE MOR MON SETTLEMENT AT SALT LAKE ... The St. Louis Republican has a letter from Green River, California Territory, dated Aug. 19th, and another from Fort Larami, Indian Territory, dated Sept. 18th, which give some interesting news from Salt Lake respecting the overland emigrants for California. It is anything but flattering. There is every probability that fifteen to twenty thousand person will be compelled to pass the winter at the Mormon settlement of Salt Lake, owing to the grass being consumed by fire for two hundred miles beyond, rendering it impossible to subsist the animals in the train of the emigrants. The supplies at Salt Lake are limited, and there will be much suffering unless the emigrants themselves are provided, which is not likely, as they have thrown away everything that could impede their travel.

It is evident that a great want of foresight, has characterized this overland expedition. The country was but little known, and the difficulties to be encountered not at all understood. First the emigrants overloaded themselves with every useless kind of article -furniture of no possible use to them, and household luxuries that could well be dispensed with in the new country they were going to. These they were compelled to abandon in a very short time, and subsequently, when their horses, mules and oxen were broken down by this unnecessary lumber, they were compelled to part with more valuable things. About one thousand wagons have been burnt or abandoned on the road. Along the banks of the North Platte to where the Sweetwater road turns off, the amount of valuable property thrown away is astonishing.--iron, trunks, clothing, &c., lythousand dollars in about twenty miles. Five hundred dead oxen, one writer says, he counted on the road. Those who will succeed in getting across to the land of their hopes will scarcely be much better off than their companions at Salt Lake. They will arrive so late that the season for working the mines will be over, and they will be compelled to pass in idleness a long winter in California, many of them destitute of money or other of the necessaries of life, and compelled to subsist upon the charity and benevolence of those who are better provided. With these pros-Aldermen and 10 Assistants. The Whigs pects before them, we must expect to hear of much suffering among them. The difficulties to be encountered will probably deter any further emigration by the land route.

> THE ROSTRUM OF DEMOSTHENES. The Rostrum of Demostbenes was above s on the side of the hill facing the sea. A seat hewn out, probably for the distinguished men of the state. The audience stood on the hill side and the orator and his listeners were all and one of artillery, with all the great in the open air.

Scene after scene swept through my fancy as I stood on the spot. I saw Demosthenes after his first unsuccessful oration, decending with a dejected air towards the temple Theseus followed by old Eunomas; abandoning himself to despair, and repressing the fiery consciousness within him, as a hopeless ambition. I saw him again with the last glowing period of a Phillipic upon his lips standing on the same rocky eminence, flashing with soccess, and his ear bent catch the low murmer of the crowd below, which told him he had moved his country as with the heave of an earthquake! I saw the calm Aristides arise with a mantle folded majestically about him, and handsome Alci. which single men can easily be distinguished from married ones, by ladies of discernment. It is by paying little attention to the conversation and manners of gentlemen. There is an ease and grace in the manners of married men, a sensibleness and want of flutter in their conversation, which enable them to be readily distinguished in a mixed company.

Unmarried men may be distinguished by general "greenness," a certain frivolousess of conversation, and a peculiar flutter of deportment, that nothing but matrimony can entirely cure.
