SUNBURY AMERICAN AND SHAMOKIN JOURNAL.

Paiscellancous Paatter.

From the Louisville Journal. SPRING. BY J. B. BARRICK.

The winter winds and storms are past, The writer white and solver, The surly blast are blown, The voice of Spring is heard at last, In blithe and joyous tone; The little streams, from frost set free, With gladdening music sing ; The south wind comes with songs of gle To welcome in the Spring.

The heart of earth its foliage wide Unfolds like summer's rose; Through wood and stream a quickening tide Of life and beauty flows; The light of May is on the sky, Its sunshine on the wing, While winter's shades and shadows fly To welcome in the Spring.

The flowers are gentle springing up On hill-side and on lawn, The daisy and the buttercep, Breathe in the balm of morn ; The rills and brooks soft answer make To birds on soaring wing, The mingling strains of nature wake To welcome in the Spring.

I list me to the cheering song Of robin and the wren, The mocking bird and jocund throng Of warbles in the glen ; The winds and zephyrs too, rejoise, While every living thing On earth outpours a grateful voice To welcome in the Spring. Glasgow, Ky., March, 1850.

STREET SHADE TREES.

We would briefly remind those who can feel the difference between bare lines of buildings, and dry, glaring, and dusty streets on the one hand,-and the softness, luxuriance, the interminable beauty of masses of green foliage, and the refreshing shade of our finest forest trees planted in villages and by road-sides, on the other,-we would remind these that the time has now come for action-no delay must be made, if another whole year is too valuable to be lost.

Most of the directions, given in the preceding article on transplanting fruit trees, are equally applicable to shade trees .- But there is one all essential part of the work, without Solid Riveted which failure is about as certain as the course of water down hill, and that is, the trees after being set out must be carefully protected from the rubbing of street animals. We have seen trees five inches through, which had been moved with nearly a ton of earth on the roots, all destroyed the second year by the rubbing of pigs and cattle. The best, most substantial, and most durable protection consists, of three posts in the form of an equilateral triangle, enclosing the tree, with hori- for New ones. zontal cross pieces, or boards securely nailed to the posts. This frame will besides prevent those who think a tree is a very handy object to hitch a horse to, spoiling it by allowing the horse to gnaw the bark. "You will be exceedingly vexed," says a late writer, in their journey !" A few brief directions for planting shade trees, may be summoned up as follows :---1. Dig the hole before the tree is taken up, for being large, its roots cannot be so easily protected from dying as a smaller tree, and

MARSHALL'S Concentrated Sarsaparilla,

For the cure of Tetter, Scrofula, Erysipalus, Piles, Chronic Rheumatism and all disorders of the Blood, Mercurial Disease, &c. is recommended to Physicians and others, as the strongest preparation now in use, and en-tirely different from that put up in quart lottles, possessing little or no active principle of the Sarsa-parilla, but intended to deceive the public.—For sale by M. A. McCAY, Northumberland.

In presenting the public with a remedy for the treatment and entre of Paran axt Acrs and other bilina diseases, no apology is needed. Vast numbers in the United States, who suffer from these affections in their varied forms, are compelled to seek relief from other sources than the imme-diate prescriptions of the regular physician. It becomes therefore an object of humanity, as well as of public inter-ent, to bring before them a remedy prepared from much ex-perience, and which may always be relied upon as sars, spiractual, axis harmines to the constitution. That which is the true character of the INDIA CHOLAGOGUE, is amply attested by the universal success with which it has been employed.

diameter, the holes must not be less than six feet in diameter, and a foot and a-half deep, and the roots of the tree taken up, of nearly corresponding size.

3. Cut round the tree two and a-half or three feet from the stem, and lift it out without tearing the roots or bruising the stemnot after the recommendation published some years ago, as a very careful mode of removing "cutting the roots with an axe, and dragging the trees out with a yoke of oxen."

4. Cut off or thin out one-half or three. fourths of the top, having an eye to the future shape of the tree. This lessens the number of leaves, the draught is less severe on the roots, the fewer shoots grow more ra. plain and ruled pidly and the wind has less power on the tree. 5. Plant the tree no deeper than before as some one quaintly remarks, 'nature has attended to the growing of trees some six thou- Posts, blue and white. sand years, and cannot in this particular be improved upon."

6. As soon as the tree is set, then immediately erect the tripod-protection, already described.

7. Cover the ground several inches deep with litter, in a circle six feet in diameter The soil cannot be easily cultivated, and this mulching is the best substitute.

Trees treated according to these rules, will begin to grow immediately, and will form handsome, rich, dense masses of foliage, in less time than those which are carelessly torn from the earth and hastily planted like a fence-post, can recover from the violence which they have received .- It is better to plant ten trees well, than twenty or thirty badly.

Trees which have grown in the open ground are hardier and far better than those taken from the forest. Thick woods afford a person in making his own applications. Price 124 cents single, or 12 copies for one dolalmost the protection of a green house; and trees removed from them and set out in open air often perish solely in consequence of their tendemess. Those from borders of swamps are often better than those from upland, the soft mucky soil more perfectly admitting the entire removal of the roots. The dissimilarity of soil where they are placed, rarely proves of any detriment. As a general rule, such trees have succeeded much the best with us. This is also, particularly the case with evergreens, which always need a large cake of earth to be removed entire upon the roots This cake should always be large enough to hold the tree stiff against the wind without any shake .- When this has been done, we have never lost a single evergreen tree by transplant- by ing. In the borders of swamps, where the muck is shallow on a hard-pan, the roots of evergreen trees usually form a thick mat of roots, all near the surface ; cutting round one with a spade, allows the tree to be taken up with great ease, the whole mass of the roots with great ease, the whole mass of the roots $G_{\text{lot} \text{ on hand and for sale by}}^{\text{OLD PENS IN SILVER CASES.
