The vain man idolises his own person, here he is wrong; but he cannot beat his company and here he is right.—Lacos.

How various the thoughts which are suggested, as we come in contact with different individuals: Some, by their grave and meditative means, remind us of the face which Nature presents on a calm summer sabbath morning-greatness and power seem to dwell in their every part; others, only half as thoughtful, recall to us the appearance of the sky in the latter part of Autumn, now serene and sprightly, and anon cloudy and agitated, while a third class, call into our memory the bags full of wind, which Homer tells us his hero received as a gift from Æolus,—these

Vanity manifests itself in three ways: affectation, a desire to be applauded for that which is not possessed, but imagined, and speculation, which results in what are commonly termed air castles. Those in whom vanity takes the form of affectation, are many, and the most disgusting of all the vain. We can scarcely go to any place without seeing it pass before us in this form, at almost every turn ! If we go into the family circle, we find it there; if into the social, our attention is called to it; in our court rooms, it is prevalent; the pulpit and prayer meeting, are even not exempt from it ;-in short, thing of interest. He states, on the 7th, about every walk of life is filled with it, more or

The terms girl and boy have become almost extinct; those whom they used to be applied to, are now called young ladies and gentlemen. If you enter the family circle of those that belong to the "upper ten," or at least, feel strongly inclined in that way, you are introduced to the young Miss and Mr. though perhaps not more than a dozen of winters old; and their conversation soon acquaints you with the fact, that they are big people too. You soon observe, that every thing is done up according to Chesterfield,that every word must be pronounced according to a certain rule, which might startle Noah Webster, yes, surprise the whole squad of lexicographers, from the first one down to the last,-the head must be kept in a certain posture, while the hands and feet (I should have said extremities perhaps, to suit the taste of the times) are made to move a la Française. While your common sense is almost scared out of you, by these affected niceties, of course not affected to them, but according to the latest fashion, you know, you are put to a still harder trial; the mother tells you with how much credit Miss Jane and Mr. Henry acquitted themselves at the last ball. "Oh! how they tripped so lightly over the tesselated floor." You are told, too, perhaps, that an evening party is shortly to be given for their special benefit; and that a billet doux has been received from such a one, and that Henry intends sending one, to the angelic little sibyl, in a such and such a part of the town. Indeed, those charming little creatures, moulded in the mould of affectation, remind you of the soap bubbles, which you sometimes see the boys blow as you pass along the street.

But, more serious, let us suppose those youths to have arrived at the age of manhood are not, what they will." How disgusting to see the young lady give herself up to continual laughter, for the simple reason, that she may draw the attention of those around tinually passing censures upon his shoemaker, derstandings most to be desired.

Affectation, when we find it in the family and social circle, is certainly odious, but what must it be, when it comes under our telligence seems to revoil at the very name? indeed contemptible. To see the counsel at | be had GRATIS of the agent. the bar, upon whose speech, perhaps, a fellow creature's life is suspended, or his character, dearer than life, with his voice screwed up on the same key with the dandy's, and trying in his gestleulation to imitate the graces of the schools, is, indeed a spectacle both to be commiserated and deprecated. But, what are we to think, when we see this child of vanity ascend the pulpit and give direction to the words of those, who, are to be the oracles of Christ? We feel shocked, and are almost ready to suspect the profession of the most zealous christians. Yes, if some of the clergy can thus permit themselves to trifle with men's souls, need we to wonder that the world is full of infidels, atheists, and other unbelievers. Shame upon those who are so much wrapt up in vanity, that they cannot even forget self in the pulpit!

Our prayer meetings too, are often infested with this same vice. It is nothing uncommon to hear some of those that lead in prayer, ufter every word in a tone which is not their own, or give their voice such an unnatural twang in singing, that the attention of all present is and hids at 25c cents. fixed upon them. What strange infatnation, for one to permit itself thus to trifle with sacred things, in order to attract the attention of men. Methinks, whenever I hear such affected praying and singing, that I see the lip of deity curl with honest scorn, at the mockery.

The next division of the vain which I have made, also, comprehends the third, that is, those who are desirious of being applauded for such qualities as are not real, but imaginary, also, build air-castles. The young are generally addicted to this kind of vanity For, as soon as persons become somewhat advanced in life once, they are not so likely to imagine themselves possessed of powers which do not belong to them, since experi-nce has placed before them, a pretty exact picture of what they are. Still there are ome who never learn; they are as vain and peculative at middle life and in old age, as hey were at twelve and one and twenty. It would seem, that such were constituted as hey are, to help to make up the diversity or more victims. To give you some idea of the sickness on the plains this year, 1 will only mention a few cases that have come under my own personal observation. I visited a train on Tuesday last. Of the 17 men composing it, 16 were sick. Another train I passed buried 7 at one time, 5 or 6 more sick, and one dying as I passed. In two instances I have passed trains where all but one had died. In on instance I saw at an encampment one tent left standing and another "struck," but lying on the ground; also barrel of crackers, several blankets, six or eight pair of boots, hats, coats, shirts, &c., &c., and near by five graves. It was a sad spectacle.

The following particulars were given me by a gentleman who overtook us yesterday, and I have every reason to believe them true although he neglected to state explicitly every fifteen miles west of Plum Creek, he found a small train of three wagons, about half a mile from the main road, and but one man able to sit up; that there were originally twelve men in the train; that six were already dead and and buried; four were about 13 Michael Shive, dving of cholera; one had the measles, and 14 Samuel Johnson the other well, but so fatigued from nursing 15 Daniel Hursh that he could hardly stand.

THE leader of an orchestra in a fashionable Church, imagined that he found some defect in the measure of the following two lines in a sublime hymn:

"Oh may my heart in tune be found, Like David's harp of solemn sound." And suggested to the pastor of the Church, that he should change it as follows: "Oh may my heart be tuned within,

Like David's sacred violin." The Minister replied that if the only obect was to quicken the measure, the following would be still more appropriate :

"Oh may my beart go diddle diddle. Like Uncle David's solemn fiddle,"

We believe the result was, that the words of the hymn remained unaltered.

Louis Republican gives a frightful account of the scenes he has witnessed during the progress of his overland route to California. Writing from 250 miles west of Fort Kearney, he says:

"During the past week we have witnessed a great amount of sickness and distress in different trains. In fact I have not yet heard of a train that has escaped sickness, and in nearly all, the monster Death has taken one requested to be then and there in their proper persons, with their rolls, records, Inquisitions, and other remembrances, to do those things to their several offices appertaining to be done. And all witnesses prosecuting in behalf of the Commonwitnesses prosecuting in behalf of the Common-wealth against any prisoner are also requested and commanded to be then and there attending in their Elizabeth Frick's ex'rs proper persons to prosecute against him, as shall ust-and not to depart without leave at their John Baily peril.
