NIGHT. BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.

The day is gone, and the darkness Falls from the wings of night, As a feather is wafted downward From an an eagle in its flight.

I see the lights of the village Gleam through the rain and the mist, And a feeling of sadness comes o'er me, That my soul cannot resist.

A feeling of sadness and longing, That is not akin to pain, And resembles sorrow only As mist resembles rain.

Come read to me some poem, Some simple and heartfelt lay, That shall snoth the heartless feeling, And banish the thoughts of day.

Not from the grand old masters, Not from the bards sublime, Whose distant footsteps echo, For, like the strains of martial music,

Their mighty thoughts suggest Life's endless toil and endeavor And to-night I long for rest. Read from some humble poet,

Whose notes gush from his heart, As showers from the clouds of summer, As tears from the eyelids start. Who, through long days of labor, And nights devoid of ease, Still heard in his soul the music

Of wonderful melodies. Some songs have power to quiet And come like the benediction

That follows after prayer. Then read from the treasured volume The poem of thy choice, And lend to the rhyme of the poet, The beauty of thy voice.

And the night shall be filled with music, And the cares that infest the day Shall fold up their tents, like the Arabs, And as silently steal away.
