FOR THE AMERICAN. DONNYBROOK FAIR, IRELAND.

Verily Donnybrook fair is, to ail intents and purposes, "dead and gone"; for the modern wretched assemblage of hungrylooking cattle, dogs-meat horses, measly swine, and forforn-looking human creatures, obliged to content themselves with staring at the exterior of the Show-booths, for want of the means to visit the interior, no more resembles the Donnybrook of the past, than a troop of the old "bulkies," armed with their Arcadian crooks, and helmeted

A SHORT STORY WITH A MORAL -- A young Yankee had formed an attachment for a daughter of a rich old farmer, and after agreeing with the "bonnie lassie," went to the old farmer to ask consent, and during the ceremony which was an awkward one with Jonathan-he whittled away at a stick. The old man watched the movement of the knife, and at the same time continued to talk on the prospects of his future son in-law as he supposed, until the stick was dwin' dled down to naught. He then spoke as follows:

"You have fine property; you have steady habits; good enough looking; but you cant have my daughter. Had you made something, no matter what, of the stick you have whittled away, you could have had her; as it is you cannot; your property will go as the stick did, little by little, until all is gone, and your family reduced to want. I have read your true character; you
