DEDICATED TO HER HUSBAND.

How still he lies, This dear and lovely babe, With her scal'd eyes, And hands so meekly laid Upon her breast-How beautiful her rest.

And is she mine-This strange and wondrons thing? Did hands divine This human flow'ret fling Upon my heart?
O, God, how good thou art!

I gaze upon Her tiny infant form, And feel I've won A ray to gild the storm That clouds life's sun, From thee, beloved one.

From me-as thee--The gloom that shrouds thy soul, O'ershadows me : Yet the dark waves shall roll. Peace, joy to thee, If thou but hopeful be.

What bliss 'twill prove, To watch our rose put forth Its leaves of love -To eatch its fragrant breath. This will be jay, Pure, sweet as reigns on high.

Look on her face! Jehovah's seal behold, Immortal trace In letters bright and bold. God give us grace Her virtues to unfold.

AN IRISHMAN'S MISTAKE. A correspondent of the Boston Horald tells the following good story: A few months ago, as Brother Ingalis, of Swampscott, was travelling through the Western part of the State of New York, he fell in with an Irishman who had lately arrived in this country, who was in quest of a brother that came on before him and settled in some of the diggins in that vicinity. Pat was a strong, athletic man; a true

Catholic, and had never seen the interior of a Protestant church. It was a pleasant Sabbath morning that Brother logalls met Pat, who inquired the road to the nearest church.

lugalls is a good, pious man. He told Pat he was going to church himself, and invited his new made acquaintance to accompany him thither, his place of destination being a small Methodist meeting house near by .-There was a gent revival there at that time, and one of the deacons (who by the way, was very small in stature) invited Brother 1to take a seat in his pew. He accepted the invitation and walked in, followed by Pat who looked in vain for the altar, &c. After he was seated be turned to Brother I-- and inquired !
