THE BULL AND THE LOCOMOTIVE.

In sort of moody madness Roamed he o'er the grassy plain-Balt in anger, half in somes, Toosed his bushy tail and maine. Was he yet the meadow's monarch-Of the pasture still the king ! And he raised his head so lordly-Gave his tail a wider swing.

Was he not acknowledged chieftain Of the horned drove of cattle ! Was he not the tried and trusted In each povine field of battle Was he not the loved and chosen Of the milch kine's fairest queen ? Was he not the admiration Of each bull-calt on the green 3

It was true, and well he knew it ; Who his claim would dare dispute ! Dearly, dearly should he me it, Be he long or short homed brute. What, then, meant this daring stranger, Who, with breath of smoke and fliame, Spouting fear and breathing danger, Through the meadows rushing came !

True, the intruder's limbs were weighty, And he seemed a thing of might; True, he might be very dangerous If he showed a wish to fight. But he blowed too much and loudly

To be willing for a lark, And the bull repeated proudly, "Bitting dogs do never bark;

"And I swear by fair Europa, When the stranger comes again-Rushing through the verdant pasture, Steaming wild across the plain-I will call my herd to battle, Boldly cross the monster's track-Either we shall be gone cattle, Or we'll drive him, frightened back :

See ! after the locomotive Whirling o'er the fragrant mead, And he nears the very meadow Where, beneath the gallant lead Of their monarch true and valiant, Stand the tawny, horned crowd ; Naught he heeds them, but the bell rings, And he whistles very loud.

From his pent-up breast escaping Shrieked the steam—a dismal cough; Frightened was the herd of bullocks, And they madly scampered off-And but one, and he, courageons, Naught but death can force to yield : He will conquer, or, as beef-meat, You shall beat him from the field.

There he stands, and waits the coming Of his foe who draweth near : Roars he with triumphant fory, From a breast that knows no fear. Sticks he down his noble frontlet, With considerable vim-Butt! he takes the locomotive, Butt! the locomotive him.

Need I tell who most did suffer ?-Need I speak the bulluck's fate ? Widowed cows, with ceaseless lowing, Will the horrid tale relate. In the flashing of the lightening-In the twinkling of a thought-He, the thief of cow affections, By the cow-catcher was caught.

Sat a farmer on the rail-car, Saw the bullock's fatal stroke-Saw him fall across the sleepers, Knew his gallant neck was broke ; Saw his form in fragments lying-As he sadly gazed at them, Quoth he, "I admire your courage, But your prodence I condemn !!!

For the Cure of COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRON-CHITIS, CROUP, ASTM-MA, WHOOPING-COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

This invaluable remedy for all diseases of the THROAT and LUNCE, has attained a celebrity from its cemarkable curek never equalled by any other medicine before. Other preparations have shown themselves palliatives, and sometimes effected notable cures, but none has ever so fully won the confidence of every community where it is known. After years of trial in every climate, the results have indisputably shown it to possess a mastery over this dangerous class of diseases, which could not fail to attract the attention of Physicians, Patients, and the public at large. See the stasements, not of obs-ure individuals and from far distant places, but of men who are known and respected throughout the country. The widely celebrated Surgeon, Dr VAL-ENTINE MOTT, of N. Y.
