Over this altar is the main cupola of the church, which is 426 feet high from the pavement. Above the cupola is the ball, reached by an iron ladder, and very difficult of ascent. I was the only one of my party that went up into it. The ball, it is said will contain 16 persons, but I think they would have to be tightly packed in. On the roof of the main church are the workshops of the men who are kept constantly employed in keeping the church in repair. They are a row of one story buildings. This church contains 11 cupolas, 96 marble columns, and 140 statues; is 575 feet long in the clear, and, under the cross, is 417 feet broad. The cost of building is said to have been over 50 millions of dollars. It is connected with the Vatican, the Pope's private residence, by a grand hall on Co. and stairway. The Vatican contains 4000 rooms and galleries, enough, one would think, for a man who can have neither wife nor family. In one of the galleries the Pope keens a number of artists constantly employed making large mosaics of the old Popes from their portraits. These are intended for the new church of St. Paul, outside the city gates. Many of the Popes are already there in the niches, each of these mosaics being about six feet high and four feet across, It requires a year's time to make one, and the price is 500 sendi each. (A sendi is 103 of our cents.) The new church of St. Paul has already been 150 years in building. and it is supposed that it will take 150 years more to complete it.

Rome has a newer and fresher aspect than the other cities of Italy, and looks more like Philadelphia than any city I have yet seen. This is the case from the fact that modern Rome is built upon the side of the Tiber opposite most of the old city, and what there was of ancient Rome on this side of the Tiber is all filled up. The Forum which is in the modern city, is thirty feet below the present surface, (it was excavated by Napoleon,) and the Tarpean rock, behind the Capitol, is only about 70 feet high, whereas, when Rome was in its glory, it was three times that height, The only part of the Campus that remains is the Carso, and even that is lined with houses.

We left Rome and came to Florence, the capital of Tuscany, by the Sienna road, a distance of about 200 miles, 150 of which we posted, and the balance, from Sienna to Florence, we came by rail. Florence is a very ancient walled city of about seven miles in circumference, situated at the foot of the Appenines, and is divided by the river Arno into two equal parts. It is called Florence the Tallow.

To Professor Holloway.

Sir.—I soffered for a considerable period from a severe attack of Erysipelas, which at length settled in my leg, and rasisted all medical treatment. My sufferings were very gract, and I quite despaired of any permanent amendment, when I was advised to have recourse to your Ontment and Pile. I did so without delty, and am happy to say the tendt was eminently successful, for they effected a radical cure of my leg and restored mis to the collyment of health. I shall ever speak with the utmost confidence of examples of the collyment of health. I shall ever speak with the utmost confidence of health, in an another of my language of the model of the same mental to other in this neighborhood similarly afflicted, who derived equal benefit.
