Or else-it matters not-may rave The storms and blasts of winter weather, Above the narrow, new made grave, Where care and I lie down together; Enough that I should know it not, Beneath, in the dark, narrow spot.

For I shall sleep! As sweet a sleep As over graced a child reposing,
Awaits me in the cell so deep,
Where I, my weary cyclids closing,
At length shall lay me down to rest, Heedless of clods above my breast.

Asleep! how deep will be that rest, Free from life's favor moving wildly, That when is past the earth's unrest, Its bosom shall receive me mildly ; For not one dream of earth shall come To invade the slumber of that home.

O deen repose! O slember blest! O night of peace! No storm, no sorrow, No heavy stirring in my rest.
To meet another weary morrow!
I shall heed neither night nor dawn,
But still with folded hands sleep on!

Shap on, though just above my head Prowl sin and misery's hoggard faces; For the deep slamber of the dead All sonse of human was crases, Palsies the heart and cures the brain Of every thought of outward pain, Armies above my rest may tramp-"Twill not disturb one rigid muscle!

I shall not beed their iron stamp

More than a less's complaining rustle; Nay, were the earth convened to break My leaden sleep, I should not wake.

And methinks, if steps of those I'd known and loved on earth were round

Twould tame the might of my repose; Shirer the iron cords that bound me-Save that I know this cannot be, g'or death disowns all sympathy !

Well be it so! Since I should yearn, Auxiously watch for their appearing, Chiding each lingering, late return, And ever sad and ever fearing-Living life's drama o'er again, Its tragedy of hope and pain.

Then mourn not friends when ye may lay The clods of earth above my ashes; Think what a rest awaits my clay And smooth the mound with tearless lash-

Glad that the resting form within Has done at length with wee and sin.

Think that with me the strife is o'er, Life's stormy struggling battle ended; Rejoice that I have gained that shore To which, though weak, my footsteps en-

Breathe the blest hope above the sod, And leave me to my rest with God.

About Potatoes.

Permit me to say a few words about the potato, a subject quite as important as the uestion concerning the adoption of the "red skirt" by the fairer portion of creation, or whether the modern bonnet was intended to protect the head or merely to hang on the back part as articles are hung on nails about the room, for convenience. I am a Yankee, and hail from the banks of the Connecticut, in the Old Bay State, and where we have nice mealy potatoes, an article I have not been able to find at Rochester. Even the famous Blue Mercies do not compare with our Carters and other varieties. I love a good potato as dearly as if I first drew my breath in that island where they raise fine ones and have no snakes; and should the question be no bread or no potatoes, I should vote sirong ly for the last article. I believe too much seed is used. My rule has been one small potato in a hill, and not cut them. I have always met with good success. The following 1 clip from the Springfield Republican : "B. R. Williams, of Coldwater, Michigan, states that he has been experimenting upon seed potatoes for several years, and he finds that one quarter of the seed generally used is an improvement. From one to two eves in a hill, he says, will produce more potatoes, of more even size, and less subject to decay than larger amount of seed.

We think our farmers generally have been tending to the same theory for several years, although they have not perhaps, carried it to extent. Our English and Irish farmers say that we use three times the seed that they do and that as a consequence we get more small potatoes and less large ones than they do. and not so good aggregate crops.-Cor Rural Siz: - I have frequently noticed your agricultural articles received from various correspendents, but do not remember in any of then to have seen the probable cause of the falling off in our potato crop, I would therefore make the following suggestion: I have been angaged in agriculture for about twenty-four years, and have during that time in common with my neighbors, planted small potatoes .-I believe it is and has been the common practice to save the small potatoes expressly for seed. Now this is totally unlike all other seed that we make use of. No one would think for a moment of shelling his author ears of corn for seed, but would on the contrary sewe select that which is the most plump and heavy, and so with all other kinds of seeds.

solid potatoes I can find for seed, without bowever expecting much change the first year, nor perhaps the second, nor even the third year, but if this plan be generally adopted, I think it must prove beneficial eventually.
