6 COTTON COMING OVER THE PENNSYLVA NIA RAILROAD .- The people of South Caro lina have virtually destroyed Charleston as a shipping port, and the trade that has hitherto found its way there now seeks new outlets. Heretofore large quantities of cotton were sent from Memphis to Charleston by the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, and from Charleston it was sent North by sea. This cotton now goes up the Mississippi and the Ohio rivers to Pittsburg. From Pittsburg it is brought east on the cars of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

SPECIE.-Gold and Silver is still coming in from Europe, in addition to the regular receipts from California. This great influx of coin is becoming burdensome to the banks in our cities, and yet the banks in this State are supposed to be in a state of suspension, and have actually incurred the penalty of the forfeiture of their charters.

This state of things shews, the suicidal and short sighted policy of the Philadelphia Banks in forcing the country Banks into a state of suspension against their interests present Legislature of this State, for his too geat and againsts their inclinations. If these city banks, which caused this state of things, could be punished without injury to the coun of: try banks, it would, perhaps, be advisable to make them suffer some of the pains and penalties of suspension.

OUR NATIONAL AFFAIRS IN THE LEGIS.

LATURE. There has been some exciting debate in our State Legislature, on the subject of our national troubles. Mr. Bound, our new Senstor, made his debut in a speech on this sub. ject, which has been highly complimented as a successful effort, Mr. Bound is an able debater, and has the necessary qualifications to make himself a useful and influential mem' ber, a matter of no small importance to this community. Mr. Bound is in favor of coercive measures in reducing the Southern States into submission, and is, perhaps, a little too radical in his views in regard to conciliation, concession and forhesrance, in upholding the undoubted rights of the north.

The speech of Mr. Clymer, the new Sensalso commended as most liberal and patriotic. In the House Wm. H. Armstroag, Esq.,

(Republican) of Lycoming, introduced a series of resolutions on the subject of our nation al difficulties, which are not only liberal and patriotic, but which he supported in a speech able and eloquent. Mr. Armstrong, though he denies that the Constitution carries slave. ry into the territories, is willing for the sake of peace to concede a portion of our territo. ries to the South, for that purposes

We also notice with pleasure a spirited and able speech of our young friend Henry G. Leisenring, Esq., of Philadelphia, on this subject, and also in defence of his constituents. It is not many years since Mr. Leisenring left Northumberland as apprentice to the minting business in Philadelphia, of which great city he is now one of its most able and worthy representatives.

BOGUS JEWELEY.-The operators in bogus Jewelry are not extinct, and until the "fools are all dead" never will be. As they mutually sustain each other, accordingly we find among us almost every month some itlnerant vender of brass wares, called jewelry, who proposes to give to each Johnny Raw who patronizes him, a good watch for gl or jewelry for one-tenth its value. The venders of this trash do not pretend to explain bow they can make money by giving away their trinkets, but doubtless argue that this is a free country, and that they have a right to catch gudgeons even with a pin book if they can manage to do so. That they are too frequently successful, especially when they fish in shallow water with a gilded bait, is too evident to be denied and is painfully suggestive of the gullibility of human nature.

The Russian Minister was smong the number. PROPOSITION. As a bright example to those who sit in stolid indifference amidst the rains of the country, we point to the patriotic stand taken in the Senate of the United States, yesterday, by General Cameron. The loyal heart of ennsylvania has at length found otterance from both her Senators. The Crittenden resolutions being before the Senate, Goverpor Bigler made an earnest and effective appeal in favor of submitting amendments to the Constitution to the people; at the cen-clusion of which, General Cameron arose in his place, and said that his colleague had eloquently represented the centiments of the great State, in offering the clive branch ; that the Senators on the other side had not responded, but that, nevertheless, the people Pennsylvania would do anything to save

In response to questions from Sepators Green and Iverson, General Cameron added and would vote vote for his peace propositions if they will save the country. This passage in the debate evidently produced a profound impression, and it clearly lost none of its force by the manly and just reproof administered by General Cameron to Mason, of Virginia, who interjected one of his characteristically impertinent speeches into the disdiscussion. We agree with Mr. Saulsbury, of Delaware, who said that Sanator Cameron of Delaware, who said that Senator Cameron had manifested a spirit of patriotism and de-votion to the country that all might imitate. -Phila.
