He says that we had 1800 men, were very strongly intrenched, and had plenty of guns and ammunition. When the enemy, numbering about six regiments as is believed, commanded our forces to surrender, Gen. Frazier held a council of officers, and it was naramously determined that the place should be held to the last extremity. The officers then took their positions, but it was soon rumored that a Kentucky regiment had thrown down their arms. The officer in question going to make some inquiry upon the subject, observed a white flag flying, and interrogating Gen. Frazier as to what it meant, the latter replied, "tell Gen.
