TO LYDIA. [This poem was written by the late Hon. Daniel Dickinson, a short time before his death, and was read from his MS. at his funeral, at Binghamton : ] In youth's bright morn, when life was new, And earth was fresh with dew and flowers,

And love was warm, and friendship true, And hope and happiness were ours. We started, hand in hand, to thread The chequered, changeful path of life, And with each other trusting tread The battle-fields of worldly strife.

We ranged in walks obscure, unseen, O'er ranged steep, through vale and glen, And climbed along the hillsides green, Unmindful of the future then. We caught the song of earliest birds. We dulled the loveliest flowers of Spring, We plighted love in whispering words, And time sped by on fairy wing. And as it passed, new joys were found, And life was gladdened by the birth Of prattling babes, who clustered round, To cheer with smiles our hun ble hearth

Fate thrust us forth before the world.

And phantoms whispered early fame,
Where hope's proud banner is unfurled,
And happiness too oft a name. Thus lured along, we rode the dark
And feaming tide of public life,
And proudly dared, with splendid bark,
The elements of storm and strife.

But storm and strife, thank Heaven! have passed; The night has fied, and morning come! And we, tossed mariners, at last Returned once more to hearth and home

They sleep amidst Spring forest glades.
Where flows its streamlet's murmuring waves.
And oft at evening's gentle shades,
Will weep beside their early graves.

TALES & SKETCHES.

THE ONE-EYED SERVANT.

BY JEAN INCELOW.

Do you see those two pretty cottages on opposite side of the Common? How bright their windows are, and how prettily the vines trail over them! A year ago one of them was the dirtiest and most foriorn-looking place you can imagine, and its mistress the most untidy woman.

She was once sitting at her cottage door with her arms folded, as if she were deep in thought, though to look at her face, one would not have supposed she was doing more than idly watching the swallows as the hearth.

The next morning Bella kept a sharp lookout both for the tiny cobbler and on her they floated about in the hot, clear air. Her neighbor's house, to see whether she could Conet Bress Goods. Enen Skirting, white lodet Guits, Brilliants, Swiss Stripe, Swiss Cambric, Jacconett, Irish Linen, Shirt Fronts, &c.

Laties Cloth and Flannel Sacking, and other flannel at low prices. White Shetland Wool, Shawls, Balmoral Skirts, &c. Skirting and the latest style of Hoop Skirts, very handsome and cleap. gown was torn and shabby, her shoes down at heel; the little curtain in her casement, She sat sometime, gazing across the com-heard the voice of the cobbler outside. She mon, when all on a sudden she heard a little ran to the door, and cried outnoise, like stitching, near the ground. She looked down, and sitting on the border, Buttons, Trimmings, &c.

Carpets, Floor and Table Oil Cloths, brown and green Oil Cloths for windows, Glit Shades, Fixtures yellow waistcoat, and red boots; he had got a small shoe on his lap, and he was stitching away at it with all his might.
"Good morning, mistress!" said the little man. "A very fine day. Why may you be looking so carnestly across the common?" "I was looking at my neighbor's cottage,

"She was always lucky," said Bella, (for that was the young wife's name :) "and her husband is always good to her."

"They were both good husbands at first," interrupted the little cobbler, without stopping. 'Reach me my awl, mistress, will you, for you seem to have nothing to do; it lies close by your foot." "Well, I can't say but they were both very good liusbands at first," replied Bella, reaching the awl with a sigh; "but mine has changed for the worse, and hers for the better; and then, look how she thrives. Only to think of our both being married on the same day; and now I've nothing, and she has two pigs, and a-"

"And a lot of flax that she spun in the winter," interrupted the cobbler; "and a Sunday gown, as good green stuff as ever was seen, and, to my knowledge, a hand-some silk handkerchief for an apron; and a red waistcoat for her goodman, with three rows of blue glass buttons, and a flitch of of bacon in the chimpey, and a rope of "Oh, she's a lucky woman !" exclaimed

Bella. "Ay, and a tea-tray, with Daniel in the lion's den upon it," continued the cobbler "and a fat baby in the cradle." "Oh, I'm sure I don't envy her that last," said Bella, pettishly. "Pve little enough for myself and my husband, letting alone

"Why, mistress, isn't your husband in work?" asked the cobbler. "No; he's at the ale-house." "Why, how's that! he used to be very ober. Can't he get work?"

"His last master wouldn't keep him, be cause he was so shabby."

"Humph!" said the little man. He's a groom, is he not? Well, as I was saying.

your neighbor opposite thrives; but no wonder? Well, I've nothing to do with other people's secrets; but I could tell you, only I'm busy, and must go."

"Could tell me what?" cried the young wife. "O, good cobbler, don't go, for I've nothing to do. Pray tell me why it's no wonder that she should thrive F' "Well," said he, "it's no business of mine, you know, but, as I said before, it's no wonder people thrive who have a servant-a hard-working one too-who is always helping them." A servant !" repeated Bella-"my neighbor has a servant! No wonder, then, every-thing looks so neat about her; but I never saw this servant. I think you must be mistaken; besides, how could she afford to mistaken; besides, how could she afford to mistaken; besides, how could she afford to pay her wages?"

"She has a servant, I say," repeated the cobbler—"a one-eyed servant—but she pays her no wages, to my cortain knowledge.—Well, good morning, mistress, I must go."
"Do stop one minute," cried Bella, urgent-ly—"where did she get this servant?"

"Oh, I don't know." said the cobbler, "servants are plentiful enough; and Polly uses hers well, I can tell you.

"And what does she do for her?"

"Do for her? Why, all sorts of things—I think she's the cause of her prosperity. To my knowledge she never refuses to do anything—keeps Tom's and Polly's ciothes in beautiful order and the baby's."

"Pear me?" sad Bella, in an envious tone, and holding up both-her hands; "well, she made.

is a lucky woman, and I always said so. She takes good care I shall never see her servant. What sort of a servant is she, and how came she to have only one eye?"

"It runs in her family," replied the cob-bler, stitching busily, they are all so—one eye apiece; yet they make a very good use of it, and Polly's servant has four cousins who are blind—stone-blind; no eyes at all; and they sometimes come and help her.— I've seen them in the cottage myself, and that's how Pol'y gets a good deal of her money. They work for her, and she takes what they make to market, and buys all those handsome things."
"Only think, said Bella, almost ready to cry with vexation, and I've not got a soul the ice. Delicate ferns fringed from the to do anything for me; how hard it is!" edge, and bright-colored flowers were emand she took up her apron to wipe away her tears. The cobbler looked attentively at her.

"Well you are to be pitied, certainly," he said, "and if I were not in such a burry—" "O, do go on, pray—were you going to say you could help me? I've heard that your people are fond of curds and whey, and fresh gooseberry syllabub. Now, if you would help me, trust me that there should be the most beautiful curds and whey set every night for you on the hearth; and nobody should ever look when you went and came."

"Why, you see," said the cobbler," hesitating, "my people are extremely particular about—in short, about—cleanliness mistress; and your house is not what one would call very clean. No offence, I hope?" Bella blushed deeply-"Well, but it should be always clean if you would-every day of my life I would wash the floor, and sand it, and the hearth should be whitewashed as white as snow, and the windows cleaned."

"Well," said the cobbler, seeming to consider, "well, then I should not wonder if I could meet with a one-eyed servant for you, like your neighbor's; but it may be several days before I can; and mind mistress, I'm to have a dish of curd." "Yes, and some whipped cream, too," re-plied Bella, full of joy.

The cobbler then took up all his tools, wrapped them in his leather apron, walked behind the wall flower, and disappeared. Bella was so delighted, she could not sleep that night for joy. Her husband scarcely knew the house, she had made it so bright and clean; and by night she had washed the curtain, cleaned the window rubbed the fireirons, sanded the floor, and set a great jug of hawthorn in blossom on

"O do, pray, come in, sir, only look at my "Really," said the cobbler, looking round "I declare I should hardly have known itthe sun can shine brightly now through the clear glass; and what a sweet smell of haw-"Well, and my one eyed servant?" asked Bella-"you remember, I hope, that I can't pay her any wages-have you met with one that will come?"

"All's right," replied the little man nod-

Trichina. When the first developments concerning trichina were made, an excitement was created which threatened to ruin the pork busi ness of the country. Subsequently it was denied that there was any danger from this new and terrible disease, and that the whole affair was merely sensational. The Illinois Academy of Sciences, composed of the most distinguished physicians and scientific u:en Chicago, have lately devoted a month to a careful investigation of the subject. They brought to their aid the science of chemistry the most powerful microscopes, and all the appliances of the laboratory. Samples of pork from all the great packing houses in Chicago were examined; and the result is the announcement that trichina exists in the "Western pork to a greater extent than in Germany, where its effects on human life have been so fearful.

The gentlemen comprising the Academy of Sciences are of a character and standing which precludes the idea of their being either interested or incompetent to judge correctly concerning the matter in question and their opinion is, therefore, authority. Thus it is settled beyond all dispute that trichina does exist in western hogs, all representations to the contrary notwitbstanding but the practical question that interests every one, is whether it is safe to cat pork at al or whether the use of this very important and almost indispensable article of food must be abandoned. The report says that cases of trichiniosis are exceedingly rare in the United States, "because of the American system of thorough cooking"; that trichina is never found in old American cured hams; that sausages are the most dangerous form of swine's flesh; that raw pork should never be eaten in any form; that trichina exists be eaten in any form; that trichina exists only in lean meat and is most numerous along the backbone; and that it is killed by a heat of 160 degrees Fahrenheit.

The report assigns filthiness in the pens where aggs are kept, and in their food, as the cause of trichina, and declares that it will be prevented by keeping the logs where they cannot come to the ground, and feeding them on clean vegetable food. Farmers who are interested in making pork will do well to make a note of this, for if trichiniosis should prevail in this country, the porkraising business is dead.

A NICE IDEA .- A London lady, corresponding with her country cousins through the medium of the press, mentions a novel, beautiful and withal inexpensive, ornament for the diener table. She says: "Talking of dinners, let me tell you of a new idea. I was present at a very reherche entertainment the other day, where I saw the following arrangement for the centre of the table: arrangement for the centre of the table:—
"There was a large square block of Wenham Lake ice, weighing, I should say, at least twenty-five pounds, which was placed on glass castors, in a dish or trough of some kind; the dish was rendered quite invisible by being entirely filled with moss, into which soaked the water which melted from the control of the control of the melting of the mass. Over the iceburg there were two arches, prettily arranged, crossing each other; they were, apparently of cane, and were bound round by garlands of flowers. The effect was enchanting. The atmosphere was delightfully cooled; the atmosphere was delightfully cooled; the inflicting a slight scratch. On Saturday the flowers were kept fresh, and the sight of this horse became violently affected, tore everytranslucent mass was far prettier than the most costly centre pieces of gold or silver plate. A tragic affair occurred in open court at Halena, Arkansas, last week. William Hanley, who once belonged to the 7th Illinois cavalry, was before the court for horse stealing, and his wife was on the witness stand, testifying to his having stolen several horses, when he drew a revolver and shot her, the ball entering her head. A second shot nar-rowly escaped the Mayor of Helena. It was only after a desperate struggle that Hanley was overcome and committed to jail. According to M. Chevalier, the use of opium in England is increasing enormously The quantity now used is certainly enormous is to prevent the water from accelerating the melting of the mass. Over the iceburg pounds; in 1863 it was 144,213 pounds.
