How Napoleon became President. There is no character in modern or ancient history more curious than that of the present Emperor of the Franch. Just now when his relations with Mexico bring events of his career. Prince Louis Napoleon, as he used to be called-the son of Louis Bonaparte, King of eye, the vanishing pulseare no signs that the Holland, and Hortense, the daughter of the Empress Josephine-had always been a schemer. He had indulged from his boyhood in dreams of empire. Being according to statute, the heir of his uncle, the first great Napoleon, he was driven by the very exingencies of his inheritance into contrivances to obtain the supreme power over France, which he without doubt persuaded himself was his right. Through long, silent jurisprudence. He knew well how to veil years he studied, until he became learned in his designs by high sounding talk about freedom and honor, and loyalty to the will

His attempts to rouse the enthusiasm of the French people, in 1830, covered him still more with ridicule. He presented himself before the army wearing the clothes of the first Napoleon, and conscious that in point of hat, coat and boots he resembled perfectly the hero of Ansterlitz, he imagined himself secure of welcome from the troops. He was utterly quenched, however, by a certain resolute Colonel Taldier, and was shipped off to America by a good-natured King of the French, Louis Philippe.

In 1840 he made another attempt, this time carrying with him a tame cagle, which he had taught to perform some exploit that he trusted the people would resolve as an omen. The eagle failed lumentably in its programme ; and again a firm, resolute officer forced his way to the theatre of actiona barrack yard-and disposed of the Prince, his fifty armed followers, his flag, his cagle, and his counterfeit staff, with as much case as though he had been dealing with a band of strolling players. This time the wouldbe Emperor was tried for treason, and years afterwards, in the garb of a workman, and went to Eugland.

He took advantage of the revolution of 1848, in which King Louis Philippe was deposed, to return to France. "The third time wins," says the old proverb, and this third time he found more favor in the this third time he found more favor in the

To MAKE GINGER BEER .- Two gallons of ginger beer may be made as follows : Put two gallons of cold water into a pot upon the fire ; add to it two ounces of good ginger, and two pounds of white or brown sugar. Let all this come to a boil, and continue boiling for half an hour. Then skim the liquor, and pour it into a jar or tub, along with one sliced lemon, and half an ounce of cresm of tartar. When nearly cold, put in a teacupfull of yeast, to cause the liquor to work. The beer is now made ; and after it is worked for two days, strain and bottle it for use. The the corks down firmly.
