LO" AN INCIDENT OF THE CAMPAIGN .- The Danville American says that at the grand reception of Gen. Geary at that place, during the late campaign, Michael Kessler, a soldier in the Mexican war and also in the war against the rebellion, and who lost a leg and is totally blind, was brought on the stand, and introduced to the gailant old leader in two wars. The meeting was full of the deepest interest, not only to the parties, but to all who witnessed it .-Who can tell the feelings of the chieftain, or the emotions that almost choked the utterance of that sightless wreck of a worn-out soldier? THE NEW BANK BUILDING .- The heavy castings for the iron safe, to be placed in the vault of the new bank building, in this place, were put into that building on Tuesday last, by means of block and tackle, on trestle work erected for that purpose. The safe is in three sections, one of them weighing seven tons, or altogether about eighteen tons. As the train returned from the Mass Meeting at Sunbury, last Friday evening, they were treated to a shower of stones and other missiles from copperheads concealed along the road. Miss Keely was severely wounded in the head, the stone cutting through her bonnet and laying bare the skull. Several others were severely wounded, and the redoubtable Major also received one on the side of the head. THE NEW MASONIC HALL.—The contract-for the erection of this building, on the site of the old public school building, in this place, was allotted to Michael Hohn and Wm. K. Martz, of Sunbury, for the sum of $7,500. The walls of the present building are to be taken down and rebuilt, with an additional story. The new building will be extended twenty feet, to the alley, with an open front for stores, on the first floor. The second story is intended for a public hall, and will be 38 feet wide by 70 in length. The third story will be occupied by the Masonic order of this place. The work of demolition is already commenced, with a strong force, and the intention is to complete the building before winter. The cost of the lot and building, when completed, will be about $12,000.

Ly THE OLD COURT HOUSE .- In a few days the old Court House, in Market Square, will be remembered only as among the things of the past. Workmen were busily engaged during the past week in tearing down this old structure, which was purchased last spring by the Masonic fraternity, of this place, for the sam of $500. The materials will be used in the new Maronic Hall. The old Court House was creeted in 1794, and was a plain but solid and substantial two-story structure, 50 by 40 feet, with eighteen inch brick walls. The first court held in this county, according to Judge Jordan's charge on taking possession of the new Court House, was on the 3th of April, 1772, in Fort Augusta. It is not known how long it was held there, until removed to the building now occupied by Mrs. Chas. Pleasants, in Market Square, where it was held until the erection of the old building, now being removed, in 1794. Thus are the landmarks and railes of olden times made to disappear, one by one, under the landmarks and railes of olden times made to disappear, one by one, under the landmarks and railes of olden times made to disappear, one by one, under the landmarks and railes of olden times made to disappear, one by one, under the landmarks of olden times made to disappear, one by one, under the landmarks of imprevents:

TOR PROVISION MARKET. - Our eltizons complain, and justly, that some kinds of provisions are kept at a higher rate in this place than any other town, or even the city of Philadelphia. Butter, for instance, while solling here at 45 cents, was bringing only 26 cents at Columbia and Lancaster. The truth is, our produce dealers regulate the prices for the consumers, and as long as the consumers quietly submit to this kind of vassalage they must expect to pay the penalty. There is no regulation of prices according to supply and demand. One dealer, finding an article somewhat scarce, offers, say, fifty per cent. more for it than his neighbor has been paying. our markets. They are retailed at prices ranging His neighbor, finding himself outbid, concludes to pay the same, or a little more. What need he care? His customers pay the advance, and if they can stand it, he is pretty sure that he can. But the produce come to market without any fixed prices, and if they can find good natured dunces, who are reckless enough to pay two prices for an article, they wisely conclude that it is not their fault. Thus, we somearticle is not to buy it unless it is sold at a fair price. Butter is still selling at 45 cents; potatoes, 60 cts.;
