A HARD WINTER PREDICTED.—Our old experi-enced weather prognostizators predict a hard win-ter. The various signs have already made them-selves apparent. For several weeks past the sad and dismal "chirps" of birds high in the sire could be distinctly heard on calm nights. The feathered tribe are now passing southward in large flocks. Flocks of wild geese have also been flying south-ward, earlier by far than is usual. This would seem to indicate the probability of a hard winter, and the wise will propare for it in time.
