

Medical.

BALTIMORE LOCK HOSPITAL.
ESTABLISHED AS A REFUGE FROM QUACKERY.

THE ONLY PLACE WHERE A CURE CAN BE OBTAINED.

Dr. J. J. JONES, a Physician and Surgeon, Specializing in External Remedies, for the cure of all Private Diseases, Weaknesses of the Back or Limbs, Sciatic Affections of Kidneys and Bladder, Involuntary Discharges, Impotency, General Debility, Nervousness, Dyspepsy, Leptomania, Loss of Taste, Tremor, Loss of Power of Sight or Giddiness, Disease of the Head, Throat, Nose or Skin, Ailments of Liver, Lungs, Stomach or Bowels—these terrible Disorders arising from the Solitary Habits of Youth—those sexual and solitary practices more fatal to their主人 than the song of Sisyphus to the Minotaur of Ulysses, blighting their most brilliant hopes of anticipation, rendering marriage, &c., impossible.

YOUNG MEN
especially, who have become the victims of Solitary Habits, will find here a safe refuge, where they annually sweep to an untimely grave thousands of young men of the most exalted talents and brilliant intellect, who might otherwise have entered the Senate with the thunders of eloquence, or waded to victory in the living lyre, may call with full confidence.

An Indiana lager carries his boots under his arm when he goes courting, putting them on when he reaches the gate, and thereby saving the polish.

Agricultural.

A PROVERBS FATTENING CATTLE.—Mr. DEAN S. HASTINGS, who is one of the leading drivers from Vermont to supply cattle for the Boston market, gave an experienced account of the relation to fattening stock at a late meeting of the Catalonia County Farmers' Club. He said the main object of the farmer was to get the most out of his flocks. It does not pay to fatten grain to poor creatures, one that does not take on flesh rapidly. Farmers will do better to dispose of such stock for what it will bring, and procure animals of good stock. He believed that one-half of the grain fed was wasted by not being fed to good cattle. Another important point is, farmers do not feed heavily enough. He would commence with as much feed as they could bear at first, and then increase in feeding twelve quarts of meal the last four quarts are worth twice as much as the first four for fattening purposes. Some farmers complain that they do not get pay for the grain they feed out, but he had noticed that it was only those who did light that thus complained. Whether the animal was to be fed a short or a long time, he would recommend heavy feeding. Mr. Hastings said he knew of nothing better than corn meal. The cob is worth but little, if anything. Those persons of whom he purchased fat stock, who were the most successful and made it the most profitable, were those who fed meal largely. If a farmer has potatoes or other roots, it is well enough to feed these in part, but a farmer will do better to exchange some of his roots for corn, to feed roots altogether. It is important to feed regularly and not too often, as the stock will eat and lie down and ruminate. It is better to feed cattle but three times a day, and sheep but once.

SUPER-PHOSPHATE.—Could you furnish me with the recipe for making bone dust or "home-made superphosphate," with bones and sulphur acid? I have all the necessaries, but would like to know the quantities, the length of time the bones should be left in, and whether they are rendered soluble, &c.—ROADSTER.

Farmers who have tried the home manufacture of superphosphate of lime from bones have generally found that it does not pay formal the trouble, fixtures, &c., besides the probability of not having so good an article as is made on a large scale, by men who have long studied the process, and how to save material. The bones must be the ground of reduced to granules; add about half the weight of the bone used, first diluted with two or three times its bulk of water. The mixing is done gradually, in tubs, heaps or vats. The bones are to be first washed with water, and the excessive portions of the acid are washed off the mass must be thoroughly stirred several days are required for the completion of the process—varying with size of the granules of the bones, frequency of application of acid, thoroughness of stirring, &c. The mass is then rendered dry enough to apply, by mixing with plain dried earth, sand, dry peat, &c., to carry the modes of working down washed bones or ground bones by mixing them with fermenting manure, and adding a portion of earth to absorb the gas, so as to make a rich compost, as much as to form a thin paste, and destroy both mind and body, should be applied immediately.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

DISEASE OF IMPRUDENCE.—When the indulged and impudent votary of pleasure finds that he has buried the seeds of this painful disease, it often happens that an ill-timed sense of shame, or dread of discovery, drives him to commit acts which render marriage impossible, and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the darling of his parents, should be led into all kinds of debauchery, and die shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another has been blighted with crows.

What a pity that a young man, the