In that beautiful part of Germany which borders on the Rhine, there is a noble casthe which, as you travel on the western bank of the river, you may see lifting its ancient towers on the opposite side, above the grove trees which are as old as itself. About forty years ago, there lived in that castle a noble gentleman, whom we shall call the Baron. The Baron had an only son, who was not only a comfort to his father, but a blessing to all who lived on his father's land.

his father's land. It happened on one occasion that the young man being from home there came a Franch gentleman to see the Baron. this gentleman came into the castle, he be-gan to talk of his Heavenly Father in terms that chilled the old man's blood, on which the Baron reproved him, saying, "Are you not afraid of offending God, who reigns above, by speaking in such a manner?"

The gentleman said he knew nothing about God, that he had never seen him. what the gentleman said, but the next morning took occasion, first, to show him a beautiful picture that hung on the wall.

"Then your son is a clever man," replied the gentleman.

Then the Baron went with him into the garden and showed him many beautiful flowers and plants. "Who has the ordering of the garden?" said the gentleman.

"My son" said the Baron; "he knows every plant, I may say, from the cedar of Lebanon to the hissop on the wall." "Indeed," said the gentleman; "I shall think very highly of him soon."

The Baron took him into the village, and showed him a small, neat cottage, where his son had established a school, and where he caused all poor children who had lost their parents to be received and nourished at his own expense.

The children in this house looked so bappy and innocent that the French gentle-man was very much pleased, and when he returned to the castle he said to the Bar-"What a happy man are you to have such a good son." How do you know that I have a good

"Because I have seen his works, and 1 know that he must be clever and good, he has done all you have shown me." "But you have never seen him."

"No, but I know him very well, because I judge of him by his works." You do; and now please draw near this window, and tell me what you observe from thence.

"Why, I see the sun traveling through the sky, and shedding its glories over one of the greatest countries in the world; and It can be done or ever could be. I behold a mighty river at my feet, and a vast range of woods, and I see pasture grounds and vineyards, and cattle and sheep feeding in green fields, and many thatched cottages here and there."

"And do you see nothing pleasent or lovei, or cheerful in all that is spread before you?"
"Do you think that I want common sense, or that I have lost the use of my eyes, my friend?" said the gentleman, somewhat augrily, "that I should not be able to relish the charms of such a scene

"Well, then," said the Baron, "if you are able to judge of my son's good character by seeing his good works, how does it bappen that you form no judgment of the goodness of God, by witnessing such wonders of his handiwork as are now before you? Let me never hear you, my good friend, again say that you know not God, unless you have not the use of your senses."

Precious Wit.—"Jack," said a father, "yesterday I forbade you associating with the neighboring children any more, and today you have disobeyed me. The next time I catch you there I shall be obliged to punish you."

The next day Jack was there again, totally oblivious of the interdiction, until he saw his father entering the neithbor's yard with a rod in his hand. Jack made for the fence, over which he leaped, pursued by his father, and rau into the barn; there he was caught.

"Now, my son," said the father, "what did I tell you I would do yesterday?" "You told me, father, that if you caught me there again, you would punish me,"
"Well!" said the father.

"Hold on, father !" said the little repro-bate, who knew that if he could make his father laugh, the matter would be all right. "You didn't eatch me there, you caught tne here.

The desired effect was produced, and the rod was dropped, but the interdiction was renewed.

A Suspicious Countryman, - A zealous representative of the young Men's Christian Association was a few days ago drunning up recruits for the "noon prayer meeting." On the street he met -, now residing outside the city limits. The representative of the young Men's Christian Assocation accosted him, and the following convention ensued; "Do you reside in the city, Mr .- "No, sir ; I live in the country."

"We have a prayer-meeting around here, and would be glad to have friends from the country meet with us; will you

THE BIG Hoos. - For the curiosity shop, and for show purposes, the big hogs are a success, but for bacon they are a failure. Why it is that so much is being said in favor of the six and eight hundred pound breed we cannot understand. The people are not fools. All know that hogs weighing three to three hundred and a half, net, are full up to the measure, for either bacon or barreled peck. Where is the farmer who would not prefer hogy in size even less than this for his bacon ; and yet we read in the papers daily, reports of great huge hogs complimented for their monstrosity. as if some advantage of Improvement was gained by their great size. Now, there are a dozen reasons why large hoge are objectionable, and but one thing only can be said in their favor, and that is, they make a bigger show than hoos of two or three hundred pounds weight. The big hog charges the feeder for every pound he weight. The man who raises him pays as much per peand for the eight hundred in one body, as it would cost to get the same amount in three parts. And our experience in log feeding is that it one log than it did from three; and then the ment was until more valuable in three hogs than in one huge overgrown monster. whose carcus would not cool when slaugh tend, unless the weather was freezing cold—and when put down in sait it is difficulty to get the hig hums and shoulders finished to the bone, so as to pack well in the hot souther weather.—Herei World.

"Jimmy, my boy, take these eggs to the stane, and if you can't get a quarter bring them hash." The boy want as directed, and came back saying, "Father, it takes me to make a trade. > J. W. WASHINGTON'S GRAND BARBER SHOP.

The old permanent shop of the town. We decline the beast, but at the same time consider that the mighty truth maybe seasonably spoken without manifesting an uncomfortable amount of vanity and ambition.

Just twenty years ago I began my business career in this place—half my lifetime thus far spent, have I stood upon the floor of our shop spent, have I shoot upon the hoor of our shop-day after day, and night after night, and applied the sharp blue gleaming steel, and within that clapse of time embraced by the mighty folds of that eventful period have I shaved nearly every-body in the country (in common parlance) and to oblige the public interest we herein publicly announce to our patrons old and new that we are ready to shave them all again three hundred thousand times or more.

Come when you please, just in time is the maxim—we are always ready to work, forenoon or afternoon, to shave you, hair cut you, shampoo you, whisker dye you, or perfume, comb and arrange the hair with artistic skill, in the "water fall" or water raise style to suit the customer. We work to please, not please to work.

Stop, don't go past our shop to get shaved on the basis of ability—because we do it as well as
