Cruelty to Animals. MR. EDITOR:-Will you allow me to occupy a small space in your columns for the purpose of saying a few words upon a subject that requires more attention than it receives, much to the

Notwithstanding that laws have been recently enacted for the more complete protection of animals against non's brutal crueity, the most inhuman crueity is a matter of every day occurrence right in our midst. It was only last winter we read of a case which occurred in the upper end of our county. It was that of a heifer which at the commencement of the season was which at the commencement of the season was turned into an open field to subsist on a stack of spoiled hay, and to rest wherever it saw fit to lie down in the open field. The winter was an unusually severe one, and thus, without food, without water, and without shelter, it, lingeringly starved and froze to death. What character of creature must be be who can thus outrage humanity and offend but tool. Is there anything short of nursing more revolting to humanity manity and offend his tool. Is there anything about of number more revolting to humanity! than this set of brutality to an inoffensive, helpless creature. While the human brute residenced himself secure against the winter's cold storms, sleeping comfortably between blankets, his starving beast by freezing in the cold snow. This, perhaps, is but one case of crucity out of a hundrest of which we hear nothing about Good created animals for our convenience, comfort and general be effect the La specified the treatment they shall receive from our hands, and any crucity practical apon them is as much a sin as is a violation of any other of his comand any ergenty practical upon them is as much a sin as is a violation of any other of his com-mands. It is not unfrequently the case that we find necessary professing Christianity, whose vie-ty 11 ces them in the front ranks of the Church, and who would consider an omission of their daiand who would consider an omission of heir dis-ly devotions a crime, but who are totally indiffe-rent in regard to the treatment of their helpiess brutes. How often during our life as far as it has gone, have we been attracted to the pig-pens of just such persons, on a cold winter's night, by the restlessness of the greatures they contained, and turned away amazed and dismayed at the misery we saw there—sold and shivering—freezing fast in their own fitth, while the good nam of the home comfortably slept. Surely, such presents to about pray, they have much to answer for. Dissolution.—The co-partnership of J. G.
