Elect Poetry. THE BAREFOOT BOY. BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Blessings on thee, little man, Barefoot boy, with cheek as red, With thy turned-up pantaloons, And thy merry whistled tunes!

O for boyhood's painless play, Sleep that wakes in laughing days, That mocks the doctor's rules, Knowledge never learning schools, Of the wild bee's morning chase, Of the wild-flower's time and place,

O for boyhood's time of June, Crowding years in one brief moon, Fewer springs, and fewer autumns, We, their master, waited for, I was rich in flowers and trees, Humming-birds and honey-bees;

Cheerily, then, my little man, Live and laugh, as boyhood can! Though the dimly shades be laid, Stable-steads the new-mown sword, Every morn shall lead thee through Fresh baptisms of the dew;

REPECTFULLY informs the citizens that he has just received his Spring and Summer Goods, at his TAILOR SHOP.

JOHN'S WIFE. Miss Barbara Snyder sat in her straight-backed chair before the fire.

Miss Barbara's black eyes looked keenly at her for a moment, and after inquiring sharply into her antecedents, references, and the like, Miss Alice Worthington (an lawyer called her) was duly installed in the office of 'companion,' and a most delightful companion she proved to be.

'No more old women for me,' she said, savagely, in response to her lawyer's look of surprise, 'after the behavior of Jane, who has been with me for thirty-nine years, and then authorizing him to examine each applicant she sent him away and waited.

'Alice,' said she one day, as the young girl sat opposite her before the fire, 'how old are you?' 'Not quite nineteen,' was the sly answer.

And Miss Barbara looked at her in surprise. 'Not quite nineteen and womanly.' It was almost incredible. Miss Barbara looked at her again, and with a new approbation of her looks, she said to her sweet fair face looked, with the sky-blue eyes half hidden by the white lids; she saw how smoothly and plainly the brown hair was fastened back, how neat and trim the dark dress, how snowy were the cuffs and the narrow collar, and her heart was filled with wonder.

There was real distress in John Barton's heart as he rose and stood before her.

'If you only let me bring her here to you,' he pleaded; 'I am sorry you are so displeased. Aunt Barby, don't let this part us.'

'You have chosen.' The Phynx could not have looked more unmoved. 'I ordered them not to admit you—you need not come again.'

'If you will only hear me—' And so John Barton left her, with her face turned away from him and her hands still clasped before her.

Miss Barbara Snyder was proud. Miss Barbara Snyder was wealthy. Miss Barbara Snyder was fond of her own way.

When at last he was really married, her anger knew no bounds, and his first visit after that great end as we have seen.

'The days passed slowly after John, with his bright face and ringing voice, was banished, and Miss Barbara, half regretting her harshness, was often tempted to send for him again; but her obstinacy, or pride, as she called it, preserved her, and so she fretted and worried, until Jane was almost driven distracted by irritability and unreasonableness.

'No more old women for me,' she said, savagely, in response to her lawyer's look of surprise, 'after the behavior of Jane, who has been with me for thirty-nine years, and then authorizing him to examine each applicant she sent him away and waited.

'Alice,' said she one day, as the young girl sat opposite her before the fire, 'how old are you?' 'Not quite nineteen,' was the sly answer.

And Miss Barbara looked at her in surprise. 'Not quite nineteen and womanly.' It was almost incredible. Miss Barbara looked at her again, and with a new approbation of her looks, she said to her sweet fair face looked, with the sky-blue eyes half hidden by the white lids; she saw how smoothly and plainly the brown hair was fastened back, how neat and trim the dark dress, how snowy were the cuffs and the narrow collar, and her heart was filled with wonder.

And Alice answered gently that perhaps it would be better for them all to do so; but she avoided her kind friend's eyes, and there was a scarlet flush on her face that was unusual.

There was a scarlet flush on her face that was unusual. The next day Alice, under Miss Barbara's directions, wrote a little note to John Barton.

'Tell him to come soon,' she said; and as Alice wrote this Miss Barbara said and thought intently for a time, her face resting on her hands. 'Tell him,' she said again, 'tell him he may bring his wife if he likes—I can't at least see her to please him.'

After this decisive note was taken Miss Barbara was in a flutter of nervousness all the time. She donned her richest dress, her most costly cap, and then sat expectant, until she heard John himself came in as of old.

'My nephew, Mr. Barton, Miss Worthington,' she said; then turning to Alice; 'I am engaged now, and you may be excused.'

Miscellaneous. A Woman at the Wood-Pile. How Heaven's First Gift to Man Serves Wood.

The Danbury News says: 'Did you ever see a woman undertake to saw wood? It is always a little while before dinner, when the pies won't bake, and the potatoes absolutely refuse to come to the table.'

'The Danbury News says: Did you ever see a woman undertake to saw wood? It is always a little while before dinner, when the pies won't bake, and the potatoes absolutely refuse to come to the table.'

TRUE WAY TO WATER TREES.—If trees standing in grass ground are watered, the surface around about the body, for three or four feet in each direction, should be covered with mulch of some sort, to retard evaporation of the soil.

When the soil appears nearly dry to the touch, the roots cannot possibly derive the needed supply of water to keep the leaves and branches from withering during the rapid evaporation which is going on at night and day.

A great many persons scatter the grass from their lawns and the weeds from their gardens in the highway, which is bad horticulture in many respects. If they would spread such grass and weeds around their growing plants or around their trees, it would be the mulch, which saves the labor of carrying many loads of water to supply the plants with the necessary moisture, and the covering would keep the weeds down, and save a vast deal of manual labor, and the crops would be heavier.

'My nephew, Mr. Barton, Miss Worthington,' she said; then turning to Alice; 'I am engaged now, and you may be excused.'
