NO TIME LIKE THE OLD TIME.

There is no time like the old time, when you and I were young.

When the buds of April blossomed, and the birds of Spring-time sang.

The garden's brightest glories by Summer sun are nursed.

But oh, the sweet, sweet violet, the flowers that open first.

There is no place like the old place, where you and I were born.

Where we lifted first our eyes on the splendor of the morn.

From the milk-white breast that warmed us, from the clinging arms that bore.

Where the dear eye glittered 'er us that will look on us no more!

There is no love like the old love, that we courted in our pride.

Though our leaves are falling, falling, and we're falling like a leaf.

There are blossoms all around us with the colors of our dawn.

And we live in the glow of sunshine when the light of day is gone.

There are no times like the old times—they shall never be forgot.

There is no place like the old place—keep them dear old spots!

There are no friends like the old friends—may Heaven prolong their lives!

There are no loves like the old loves—God bless our loving lives!

"Down in a Coal Mine."

I am a jovial fellow, As blithe as blithe can be;

For, let the times be good or bad, There's all the same to me;

'Tis little of the world I know, And care less for its ways;

For where the dog-star never glows, Chorus.

Down in the coal-mine, underneath the ground, Where the gleam of sunshine never can be found;

Digging dusty diamonds all the season round, Down in the coal-mine, underneath the ground.

My hands are horny, hard, and black With working in the vein,

And, like my clothes upon my back, My speech is rough and plain;

Well, if I stumble with my tongue; 'Tis one excuse to say—

'Tis not the collier's heart that's strong, 'Tis the head that goes astray,

Chorus.—Down in a coal-mine, etc.

At every shift 'er's soon or late, I haste my bread to earn,

And anxious to get home, I wait, And watch for my return;

For death, that levels all alike, What'er their rank may be,

And fling his darts at me, Chorus.—Down in a coal-mine, etc.

How little do the great ones care— Who sit at home secure—

What seemed worse than death.

If he beside the loaded car, in a narrow space, one of his legs broken.

The car alone saved him from being crushed into a shapeless mass.

A portion of the fallen heap lay upon the broken limb, and to extricate this was a painful task.

Sturbridge set about it, however, and finally freed the aching member.

Then came the dreaded suspicion of dying slowly in that dark, noxious and narrow tomb.

All efforts to get away were futile, and all hopes of being relieved by his companions were also given up.

As they had retired from work for the night, and would not return until morning.

He knew that if he lay there all night, he would never again see the light of day.

For he was very feeble, and a cold perspiration was already flowing from every pore.

The minutes seemed hours, the hours months, as he lay there from five until ten o'clock.

At length when exhausted by despair, and agony of soul, he heard the sounds of pick and shovel overhead.

He felt at hand, and his comrades were digging for him. It was joyful music to him to hear each stroke as it helped to break the wall that sent him out from the blessed atmosphere of heaven.

He was extricated and carried to his home, where he received due attention.

It happens that a little before ten o'clock his friends missed him, and seeing that he did not return home, and that no one knew of his whereabouts, a search was instituted, which resulted in his recovery and happy release.

DRINKING WATER.—Dr. Hall is opposed to the immoderate drinking of water.

He says: The longer one puts off drinking water in the morning, especially in the summer, the less he will require during the day.

If much is drunk during the afternoon, the thirst often increases, and a very unpleasant fullness is observed, in addition to a metallic taste in the mouth.

The less a man drinks the better for him, beyond a moderate amount.

The more water a man drinks the more strength he has to expend in getting rid of it.

For all the fluid taken into the system must be carried out; and as there is but little nourishment in water, tea, coffee, beer and the like, more strength is expended in carrying them out of the system than they impart to it.

The more a man drinks the more he must perspire either by lungs or through the skin; the more he perspires the more carbon is taken from the system; and but this carbon is necessary for nutrition, hence the less a man is nourished the less strength he has.

Drinking water largely diminishes the strength in two ways, and yet many are under the impression that the more water swallowed the more thoroughly is the system "washed out."

Thus, the less we drink daily at meals, the better for us. If the amount were limited to a single cup of hot tea or hot milk and water at each meal, an immeasurable good would result to all.

Many persons have fallen into the practice of drinking several glasses of cold water, or several cups of hot cups of tea or coffee, at meals, out of mere habit; all such will be greatly benefited by breaking it up at once; it may be very well to drink a little at each meal, and, perhaps, it will be found that in all cases it is much better to take a single cup of hot tea at each meal than a glass of cold water, however pure.

THE PECULIARITIES OF POMPEII.—Pompeii, that beautiful and ill-fated city, buried underneath the shower of ashes, pumice and stones cast forth from Vesuvius, A. D. 79, and first rediscovered in 1688, and now a ruin of world-wide interest, is said to have derived its name from the word pompe, with reference to the pomp with which Hercules, its founder, celebrated his victories.

The frescoes, which have outlived 1,669 years' concealment, are brilliant yet in the forum and temples. The art of fresco painting is still with us in practice, and the records of the Roman people and the dand of centuries is lost to the people, cunning and rich, whose hands wrought the beauties of Pompeii.

In the houses of this excavated city the dining hall is always found most beautifully decorated. In these noble rooms the Romans reclined at feasts, at which small tortunes were expended. It is said of Lucullus that once wishing to deceive Pompey or Cicero when they insisted upon dining with him en famille, he simply sent word home that he would dine in the room called "the Apollo," where he never gave a supper for less than a sum amounting to $9,000 of our money.

In the house of Scourus the most marvellously rich frescoes adorned its walls, and lamps of bronze gave brilliant light. The tables were set and were covered by a platoon of solid silver, chased and carved, weighing five hundred pounds.

The three couches were of bronze, overlaid with ornaments of silver, gold and tortoise shell; the feather cushions were of stuff of silk and gold threads. Pliny says of the tables of citron wood that they were made of the roots and knots, and prized for their veins and marks, which resembled a tiger's skin or peacock's tail.

In a further description of this dining hall of Scourus, in Pompeii, it is stated that the floor was finished in mosaics representing the fragments of a feast as though just fallen from the table—hence it was called the "unweped saloon."

The weather during the last Winter in Vienna, Milan, Rome and Naples has been as unfriendly to the invalid as it has been in this city. Indeed, there is no place in Europe that is so suitable for Winter resort for invalids and whoever crosses the Atlantic in quest of such a resort makes a grave mistake.

A MINER'S TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.—The Scranton Republican of Saturday thus relates a fearful experience undergone by a miner named Sturbridge, at the Diamond Mine:

"It was a little before 5 o'clock in the evening when Sturbridge was loading the last car for the day. His companions in the chamber had retired, and two trackmen who had spoken to him but five minutes previously, also left the mine.

He was by the side of the car stooping to pick up a coal, when, like a thunderbolt, he heard a crash in the roof above him, and an instant later an immense mass of coal, over thirty tons in weight, descended upon him, burying himself and the loaded car beneath its massive proportions, and breaking the unfortunate fellow's leg.

For a few moments he was utterly unconscious, but when he recovered he found that his position was an awful one indeed, and to him
