THE REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION. -The Convention which met at Lancaster last week, was a regular old fashioned Pennsylvania convention in every respect. stordy, independent and determined; not to be coaxed nor driven-beat by no section, influenced by no government-respecied and enthusiastic. It fairly represented the common sense of the old Keystone that stood by the State in the past in many hard-fought battles, politically, and military. There were no factious influences present, and everything moved along without the least jar. The Philadelphia "faction," anti the Pittsburgh "faction." and Government "faction" proved idle-the country districts ruled. The men from the country had opinions of their own and stuck to them manfully. They were determined to root out factions, and have the party united and harmonious. They erected a platform of the right stuff, and placed candidates in the field as standard bearers of their own, and allowed none to bully them in their choice either in the selection of their candidates or the adoption of their platform. The delegates from the country did themselves honor in performing their work with that independence that admitted no dictation from any faction or rings. The candidates chosen come from the ranks of the masses who recognize no faction, but adhere strictly to such principles and measures as they think may promote the public good, and that of the good old Commonwealth. The 'third term' humbug, on which the opposition had made calculations for political capital, was dealt with boldly and squarely, and if the President ever cherished such aspiration (which we do not believe,) this emphatic protest has certainly convinced him that the Old Keystone State is not disposed to favor any such hobby. The fact is that all the ammunition of the opposition for the coming campaign has been entirely left without a particle of material to manufacture anything new. Even the candidates are so free from tarnish that they them disparagingly, and the only opposition they can make is to the Republican cause, which has stood the test too long, times subject to fair criticism, that an inand has too clear a record to effect any da-

The renomination by acclamation of Governor John F. Hartranst is a deserved compliment. He has made a record so admirable while in office, that even his opponents have admitted that he has wholly silenced his detractors. Going into office with the most unprecedented assaults against him by his opponents, he has established his character as the most tho; ough, upright and independent governor that this State has had for many years. This is readily acknowledged by all parties. That be ought to be elected as an encouragement to well-doing in office must, we think, be clear to the public. That he has the entire confidence of the people of Pennsylvania is not doubted, and to defeat him now on account of a difference of opinion in regard to political principles would not only be monstrous, but would prove that his opponents are not sincere in their advocacy nisherest, maight and good men to fill the

The nomince for State Treasurer, Henry Rawle, is so well spoken of by all who know him, that no valid objection can be urged against him. Even his political opponents admit that he will make an honest, capable and efficient officer. With such candidates as standard bearers, it matters not whether the cry is 'party first and men afterwords, ' 'principles, not meu, 'or 'men, principles and party.' They meet all demands. In them we have the best principles of the best party, represented by the best men. The people can ask no more.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER. EXECUTIVE MANSION, Washington, May 29, 1875.

DEAR SIR: A short time subsequent to the Presidential election of 1872 the pressa portion of it hostile to the Republican party, and particularly so to the Administration, started the cry of "Cæsarism" and "the third term," calling lustily for me to define my position on the latter subject. I believed it to be beneath the dignity of the office which I have been twice called upon to fill to answer such a question before the subject should be presented by competent authority to make a nomination, or by a body of such dignity and authority as not to make a reply a fair subject of redicule. In fact, I have been surprised that so many sensible persons in the Republican party should permit their enemy to force upon them and their party an issue which cannot add strength to the party, no matter how met. But a body of the dignity and party authority of a convention to make nomination for the State officers of the se- bail. cond State in the Union having considered

In the first place, I never sought the office for a second, nor even for a first nomination. To the first I was called from a life position-one created by Congress expressly for me for supposed services rendered to the republic. The position vacated I liked. It would have been most agreeable to me to have retained it until such time as Congress might have consenportion of the emoluments which I so much needed, to a home where the balance or my days might be spent in peace and the enjoyment of domestic quiet, relieved from cares which have oppressed me so connot pleased at this, and at the overwhelm- office as Governor of the State. best of my understanding, though I admit ground. in the light of subsequent events many The grasshoppers are very scarce in the ern republics, was a gratification that it will be ready to harvest next week. is human to have appreciated and enjoyed.
