OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C. January 25, 1876. j

The debate on Amnesty and the Centennial appropriation brought Democracy, and shows that State rights and strict construction of the Constitution. as taught by John C. Calhoun, is the main policy of the Democratic party. The sixty-one rebel brigadier generals in the House of Representatives control the Democratic members of Congress, North and West, and they are so weak-backed that they do their bidding as willingly as did their predecessors before the war. Hon. Randolph Tucker, of Virginia, in his speech against the Centennial bill, sounded the key-note, and two Pennsylvania Democrats, Messrs. Cochrane and Stenger, took up the cry, and in their chin music argued that it was unconstitutional for Congress to make an appropriation in aid of our Centennial celeno mention of these facts, therefore it is CINCINNATI, January 23 .- The Gazette's the unwritten law, and the Constitution
