THE RIVER PATH.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIES. No bird song floated down the bill, The tangled bank below was still. No rustic from the birchen stem. No ripple from the water's hem. The dust of twilight round us grow. From us, ere the day was done. The wooded hills shut out the sun. But on the river's fartherest side. We saw the hill top glorified-A tender glow, exceedingly fair, A dream of day without its glare With us the damp, the chill, the glosm, With them the sunset's rosy bloom; While dark through willowy mist as seen The river rolled in shade between. From out the darkness where we trod, We gazed upon the hills of God. Whose light seemed not of moon or sun : We spake not, though our thought was one. We paused, as if from that bright shore Beckoned our dear ones gone before : And stayed our beating hearts to hear Sudden our pathway turned from night. The hills swung open to the light : Thro' their green gates the sunshine sh A long, slant slender downward flowed, Down glade and glen and bank it rolled, It bridged the shaded stream with gold : And borne on piers of mists allied, The shadowy with the suntit side! "So," said we, "when our feet drew near The river dark, with mortal fear, And the night cometh chill with dew, O Pather! let thy light shine through! So let the hills of doubt divide, So bridge with faith the sunless title So let the eyes that fall on earth On thy eternal hills look forth :
