THE DAY IS GOVE. The day is done, and the darkness Falls from the wings of Night. As a feather is walted downward From an eagle in his flight. I see the lights of the village Gleam through the rain and the mist Ania feeling of sadness comes o'er me.

That my sunl cannot resist. A feeling of sadness and longing That is not akin to pain, And resombles sorrow only As the mist resembles the rain.

Come, read to me some poem. Some simple and heartfelt lay. That shall southe this restless feeling. And banish the thoughts of day, Not from the grand old masters. Not from the bards sublims. Whose distant footsteps echo

For, like the strains of murtial music, Their mighty thoughts suggest Life's endless toll and endeavor: And to night I long for rest. Read from some humbler poet.

Through the corribors of Time

Whose songs gushed from his hear. As showers from the clouds of summer. Or tears from the evelids mart. Who, through long days of labor, And nights devoid of cust.

Such songs have power to quiet The restless pulse of care, And come like the benediction That follows after prayer. Then read from the treasured volume

The poem of thy choice.

Still beard to his soul the mosts

Of wonderful melodies.

And lend to the rhyme of the poes The boauty of thy voice, And the night shall be filled with musto, Apil the cares, that intest the day. Shall fold their tents, like the Arabs
