

Permanent Pastures

We can have pastures that will improve every year with but the plow. There are thousands of farms in the cheese districts of England where the plow is not used at all in the pastures. There is a soft velvet turf, the result of a century of close feeding. There are millions of acres of pastures in the main Missouri country fed for ages by the buffalo and antelope, growing richer every year by the grazing of these animals and the decay of the buffalo grass. In the best grazing districts of New York and Western Connecticut, there are large farms kept in permanent pasture, and growing more fertile every year by the feeding of beef-cattle.—The only fertilizer applied beside the dropping of the cattle, is an occasional dressing of plaster, at the rate of a bushel to the acre. Some of these farms will carry a thick mat of grass upon the sod when the bullocks are sold off in the Fall. The store-cattle are bought in the market in the Spring, and put in the pastures as soon as the grass starts sufficiently to feed them. The cattle increase in weight, and in the quality of their beef, during the season, and are sold to the butchers as soon as they are ripe, from August to November. One man can take care of several hundred cattle, and the winter is a season of leisure. Where there is good judgment in buying and selling, the profits of this kind of farming are very handsome, and the farms are all while improving in fertility. Everything it produces is returned to it again.

Sickness of Animals

Nearly all stock animals become so by improper eating, in the first place. Nine cases out of ten, the diet is wrong. Charcoal is the best corrective. It will cure in a majority of cases, if properly administered. An example of its use: The hired man came in with the intelligence that one of the finest cows was very sick, and a kind neighbor proposed to send him a dose of charcoal. The owner being ill and unable to examine the cow, concluded that the trouble came from overeating, and ordered a toncupful of pulverized charcoal given in water. It was mixed, placed in a junk kettle, with the charcoal poured downward. In five minutes improvement was visible, and in a few hours the animal was in the pasture, quietly eating grass. Another instance of equal success occurred with a young heifer which became badly bloated by eating green apples after a hard winter. The charcoal was so severe that the sides were almost as hard as a barrel. The old remedy, salaratus, was tried for the purpose of correcting the acidity. But the attempt to put it down always caused coughing, and it did little good. Half a teaspoonful of fresh powdered charcoal was next given. In six hours all appearance of bloating had gone and the heifer was well.

Everlasting Fence Posts

The correspondent of the Western Rural says: I discovered, many years ago, that wood could be made to last long, and that it could be made to grow through the process so simple and inexpensive that it was not worth while making any other kind of timber for fence posts. I have tried it on bass wood posts, after they had been cut down, and were as sound when taken up as when they were first put in the ground. Time and weather seemed to have no effect on them. The posts can be prepared for less than two cents apiece, for the benefit of others, I will give the recipe. Take boiled linseed oil and stir in it pulverized charcoal, to the consistency of paint. Put a coat of this on the timber, and there is not a man who will live to see it rot.

A Remarkable Tavern

The Bellefonte Watchman says: "We are apt to journey from home to behold natural curiosities, forgetting that in our own neighborhood there may be equally curious and interesting phenomena. Such a curiosity in nature we have in our own county. About four miles east of Center Hall, on the farm of John Long, a short distance from the mountain road to Bushvalley, can be seen this strange and remarkable spectacle. Just below the farm house is a funnel-shaped opening of the ground about 150 feet deep, at the bottom of which swells forth in streams a large quantity of water. This is the apparent starting place of Penn's Creek, a large copious stream which meanders through the eastern portion of Center, Union and Snyder counties, uniting with the waters of the Susquehanna at McKees Falls.

Mozart's Requiem

One day, as Mozart was seated in his study, in a profound reverie, he heard a carriage stop at his door. A stranger was announced, who asked to speak with him. He was an aged man, very well dressed, of noble and imposing manners. He said to the composer: "I am commissioned by a great man to come and find you."
