Recreation for Farmers.

Farmers necessarily live at considerable distances from each other, and size the should be free from color, unpleasant in consequence of this and their name in any climate, which makes the er of the soil from weeds, and is often sowed for that purpose. Its roots penetrate deeply, while its dense fopenetrate deeply, while its dense fo-liage so completely shades the ground that, though the seeds of many weeds may germinate, they cannot struggle up to the sun and ripen. Even that stubborn pest, the Canadian thistle, can be smothered out by successive buckwheat crops.
