Miscellaneous.

This unrivaled Southern Remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of Mercury, or any injurious mineral substance, but is PURELY VEGETABLE, containing those Southern Roots and Herbs which an all-wise Providence has placed in countries where Liver Diseases most prevail. It will cure all diseases caused by Derangement of the Liver. The Symptoms of Liver Complaint are a bitter or bad taste in the mouth; Pain in the Back, Sides or Joints, often mistaken for Rheumatism; Sour Stomach; Loss of Appetite; Bowels alternately costive and lax; Headache; Loss of Memory, with a painful sensation of having failed to do something which ought to have been done; Debility, Low Spirits, a thick yellow appearance of the Skin and eyes, a dry Cough often mistaken for Consumption. Sometimes many of these symptoms attend the disease, at others very few; but the Liver, the largest organ in the body, is generally the seat of the disease, and if not regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness and DEATH will ensue. This Great Unfailing SPECIFIC will not be found the Least Unpleasant. Somebody Loves Me.

Two or three years ago the Superintendent of the Little Wanderers' Home in Bosten, received one morning a request from the judge that he would come up to the court room. He complied directly, and found there a group of seven girls, ragged, dirty, and forlorn, beyond even what he was accustomed to see. The judge pointed to them, and said:

"Mr. T——, can you take any of these?"

"Certainly; I will take them all," was the prompt reply.

"All! What in the world can you do with them all!"

"I'll make women of them."

The judge singled out one, even worse in appearance than all the rest, and asked again:

"What can you do with this one?"

"I'll make a woman out of her," Mr. —— firmly and hopefully. He took them all home. They were washed and dressed, and provided with a good supper and beds. The next morning they went into the school room with the rest of the children.—Mary was the name of the little girl whose chance for better things the Judge thought poor.

During the afternoon the teacher said to Mr. T——, in reference to her: "I never saw a child like that; I have tried for an hour to get a single smile, and failed."

Mr. T—— said afterward himself that her face was the saddest he had ever seen, sorrowful beyond expression; yet she was a very little girl—only seven or eight years old.

After school he called her into his office, and, said pleasantly; "Mary I've lost my pet. I used to have a little girl here that would wait on me and sit on my knee, and I loved her very much. A kind lady and gentleman adopted her, and she went to live with them. I miss her and I should like you to take her place, and be my little pet; will you?"

A gleam of light flitted over the poor child's face as she began to understand him. He gave her ten cents and told her she might go to a store near by and and buy some candy. While she was gone he took two or three newspapers, tore them in pieces, and scattered them about the room. When she returned in a few minutes, he said to her: "Mary, will you clean up my office for me? pick up them papers, and make it look real nice."

She went to work with a will. A little more of this sort of management— treating her just like a kind father would—wrought the desired change. She went into the school room after dinner with so changed a look and bearing that the teacher was astonished. The child's face was absolutely radiant; and half fearful of some mental wandering, she went up to her and said, "Mary, what is it? What makes you look so happy?"

"Oh! I've got somebody to love me," the child answered earnestly, as if it were heaven come down to earth.

That was all the secret. For want of love that little one's life had been so cold and desolated that she had lost childhoods faith and hope. She could not at first believe in the reality of joy or kindness for her. It was the certainty that some one loved her and desired her affection that lighted the child's soul and glorified her face.

Mary has since been adopted by wealthy people, and lives in a beautiful home in New England; but more than all this comfort and beauty, running like golden thread through it all, she finds the love of he father and mother.

Shall we who have many to love and to love us, refuse to be comforted, to see any value and use in life, any work for our hands to do, because one of our treasures may be removed from our sight—from our home and care to a better?

And Oh! shall we let any of these little ones go hungering for affection—go up even unto God's land before they find "somebody to love them."

Testing a Plowshare.

There are three ways of picking a good share. First, by sight; second by feel; and third, by sound. Have you got a good share now? If so, mark it; break it when you are done with it, and note its color; or suspend it and strike it with a hammer, noting its sound, and select the other accordingly. In a hard share the iron is much whiter than a soft one. This a rule—the whiter the iron is the harder the share, and vice versa. Again, the ringing sound of shares when suspended and struck, varies over several full musical notes. So, if you know anything of music, you can select your share by your tuning fork. This gives us another rule viz: the sharper the ring the harder the metal, and vice versa. Another unfailing method is by the feel—select the thickest part of the share, and run your finger over the surface of the implement at that place. If the metal is hard you will perceive an evident lack or hollow over the thick part; if not hard, this hollow will not be observed. In selecting a share by sound, the ring should correspond with that of a steel saw blade. —Canada Farmer.

The Expression of Dress.

Women are more like flowers than we think. In their dress and adornments they express their natures, as the flowers do in their petals and colors. Some women are like the modest daisies and violets—they never look and feel better than when dressed in a morning wrapper. Others are not themselves unless they can flame out in gorgeous dyes, like the tulip or the blush-rose. Who has not seen women just like white lillies? We know several double marigolds and poppies. There are women fit only for velvets, like the dahlas; others are graceful and airy, like azaloas. Now and then you see holly-hocks and sunflowers. When women are free to dress as they like uncontrolled by others, and not limited by their circumstances, they do not fail to express their true characters, and dress becomes a form of expression very genuine and useful.—Meredith.

Rag Carpet Gossip.

A farmers's daughter writes as follows: Rag carpets and their manufacture form an essential branch of domestic economy among farmers; for being made principally from cast off clothing, the expense, aside from the labor, need not be very great, and the old garments are thus made to do double duty. Furthermore, the carpets are not too fine for use; yet, when well made, and the colors nicely blended, are really handsome, and give an air of cheerfulness and substantial comfort to the din ing and living room of the farm house, not easily attained by a shabby, threadbare, ingrain or three-ply.

I know many farmers whose chambers and sitting-rooms and, in fact, every part of the house except, it may be, the parlor, are carpeted with this home-made tapestry; the sensible "woman-folks" preferring plain furniture to the privations attending so many fine things, and the difficulty of keeping up a style to correspond upon the not always immese income of the working farmer. If any of the family can engage in any employment, which will enable them to get carpets for the parlor or chambers more easily than to make them at home, it would, of course, be better, and Brussels or ingrain would give better satisfaction; yet for more common use, for the sleeping rooms of the family and the dining-room, which, in winter at least, is often used as kitchen, too, to give us rag carpets.

Some people take great pains in preparing their rags. I do not wish to reflect upon those ladies who made them in so short a time, for I know nothing of their method. But I know there is no vast difference in the quality of rag carpets. Some cut the rags very fine, and instead of cutting around the corners of an angular piece of cloth, cut every strip off and sew on the next one, in order to avoid the uneven places and ragged corners sticking up in the carpet. This necessitates an amount of sewing which would look rather formidable for two month's work.

Again, instead of tearing any of the cotton rags they cut them all to avoid the fringed and ravelled edges. Hence the alternative of cushioned shears or blistered fingers. No doubt all this seems to many useless labor, "just for a rag carpet." But there is a perceptible difference in carpet made in this way, and the shabby affairs we sometimes see which were made years ago. Besides, those of us who depend upon rag carpets for our best rooms naturally wish to carry their manufacture to the highest possible degree of perfection.

As to "hip ship" or "hit-and-miss" carpets, they are very pretty while new, and the colors are bright, but with constant use and frequent sweeping even the fast colors will grow dim long before the web begins to fail.—Then they are no longer chene, but all of a color, and their want of design or form makes them seem very homely, while a stripe holds its own far better. Of course it need not be a glaring contrast or red and yellow, or green and orange, but shaded greens, a little red and less yellow—almost none at all of the latter—rich brown, maroon, etc. Two or three shades of a color are almost as necessary to produce a pleasing effect as in embroidery and worsteds.

A light aniline red shading into maroon, or if you are partial to brighter colors a cochineal scarlet, maddered, which usually has a yellowish tinge, and orange. Blue was always a perplexity to me. I could not find a place for it anywhere in a stripe; it would not harmonize with anything. I should have left it out entirely if I had had my own chice in the matter. But finally after looking at some green and blue plaid dress goods, a bright idea crossed my mind. I put a thread of black and a thread of blue alternately until I had five of black and four of blue, and on either side two shades of green, the darkest next the black and blue.

This proved to be the handsomest stripe of all, and the blue did not look out of place or jar upon one's nerves of vision. Black and white, "thread and thread," makes a very pretty centre for a red stripe. Many of these colors, blue, yellow, orange, and two or three shades of green, may be colored upon cotton, and are as durable as anything in a rag carpet. Old calico dresses and aprons dyed with cutch make a good brown; and an old worsted dress either gray or brown, if not too dark, dipped in an aniline dye, will make a garnet of maroon.

To Have Apples Every Year.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune tells three ways of having apples every year. We give them for what they are worth, although we do not consider them infallible. No. 1 is certainly not to be depended upon, and No. 3 is to be demonstrated before we believe:

1 Take scions from a tree in 1873 and put them into a good thrifty tree, and do the same in 1874, and you will get fruit in alternate years.

2. If you cut off of the thrifty trees the growth of 1873 in the last of June leaving three or four buds that would come out in 1874, you would force out the next years's buds and gain one year.

3. If you remove all the blossoms on one half of your trees in the bearing year you will have fruit on that half of the odd years. These things I have done successfully. I have now in bearing the Victory apple of be odd year, produced in this way. Next year the scions of the last year will bear in the regular order.

The Ruling Passion Strong in Death.

This incident occurred in a little African kingdom adjoining Ashantee: "A woman slave, who was condemned to die, was stripped according to custom and knocked on the head. Being only stunned by the blow, she recovered her senses, and saw herself surrounded by dead bodies. She ran into the town, found the nobles sitting in council, told them she had been to the land of the dead, and that she had been sent back because she had no clothes. They must dress her finely and kill her over again, which accordingly was done."

The "Labor Reform" Demand for Money.

We must repeal the law which gives to the banks the profits arising from the currency furnished by the government; recall the National Bank notes; return to the banks the bonds that belong to them; create a new legal-tender currency, and lend this currency or money to any one who can furnish the proper security, charging, say, 4 per cent per annum for the money; the securities to be the productive industries of the country, putting real estate in the first class, as entitled to a loan nearest to its value, and government securities as the second. We should object to a loan being made of railway bonds, or any other such evidences of debt or representations of wealth. Persons wishing to borrow on such securities could apply to banks or private lenders. The loans made by government must always be on a first claim on property. It is a question whether the government should not supply the people with a currency on as easy terms as it does now the banks, and raise the money needed to pay the obligations of the government by a direct tax upon the accumulated wealth of the country. It will not cost the government over one per cent to construct the machinery and issue the currency needed by the trade of the country. The other three per cent might be collected by a direct tax, and we do not care whether the one per cent is called interest or tax. We should thus approach the day when interest on money would be so insignificant as not to be depended on for support. Until the national and present State debts are paid, the interest charged by the government, or tax for issuing currency, might be four per cent per annum. When they are paid, the price could be reduced to three or two per cent per annum, as it is estimated that two per cent would pay all the expenses attending the system, and pay the expenses of the government besides, so that there need be no more or very little more money raised by any other tax, direct or indirect, except this, which might be called a tax for supplying the country with currency. The public debts being paid, there would be no need of taxes for that purpose. Absolute free trade being inevitable because of our increased facility for production, the enormous expenses attendant on custom-houses would be saved, and government expenses could be materially reduced. This new legal-tender currency should be similar to our "greenbacks," and adding, "this is a legal-tender for all debts public and private, in the United States of America."

We need more money. If we have given the true definition and true use of money, how shall we limit the amount? How shall we ascertain what is needed? Is there any better standard of what we ought to have than what we need? We see no other, and therefore ask that a law be passed by Congress by which this new legal-tender money shall be supplied to any one who will comply with the terms, one of which should be, that so long as the security is not reduced, and the annual tax or interest is paid punctually, the principal shall not be demanded during the life of the borrower.—*O. A Chinese Burial.

About five o'clock in the afternoon the body, enclosed in a fine coffin, was placed on the sidewalk in front of her late residence, and by its side was ranged tables loaded with roast chickens, roast pigs, boiled rice, candy, nuts, brandy whiskey, &c., sufficient in quantity to keep the spirit of the deceased from getting hungry for a month. These articles and the coffin remained on the sidewalk until late the next afternoon, surrounded by paid mourners, who seemed to be carrying on a lively competition in the matter of giving full value for the money recieved. At the cemetery, after the coffin had been lowered, hired mourners and two children of the deceased walked around the grave once, while the husband stood silently by. The vessels containing the food were put in the grave at the head and foot of the coffin, followed by a small quantity of earth. The grave having been filled up, brandy and whiskey were sprinkled upon it in a liberal manner, while a pig's head, roast chicken, boiled rice, oranges, apples, candy, &c., were laid upon the mound. The ceremony being concluded, the Chinese returned home in their carriages, while some Christain boys, who had been closely watching the proceedings gathered up the fruit candy &c., and likewise left for home.

Common Sense.

There is a chilly, disagreeable article, called common sense, which is, of all things most repulsive and antipathetical to all petted creatures whose life has consisted in flattery. It is the kind of talk which sisters are very apt to hear from brothers, and daughters from fathers and mothers, when fathers and mothers do their duty by them! which sets the word before them as it is, and not as it is painted by flatterers. Those women who prefer the society of gentlemen, and who have the faculty of bewitching their senses, never are in the way of hearing from this cold matter-of-fact religion; for them it really does not exist. Every phrase that meets their ear is polished and softened, guarded and delicately turned, till there is not a particle of homely truth left in it. They pass their time in a world of illusions; they demand these illusions of all who approach them, as the condition of peace and favor. All persons, as a sort of instinct, recognize the woman who lives by flattery, and give her the portion of meat to which she is entitled in due season; and thus some poor women are hopelessly buried, as suicides used to be Scotland, under a mountain of rubbish, to which each passer adds one stone. It is only some extraordinary power of circumstances that a man can be found to invade the sovereignty of a pretty woman with any disagreeable tidings, or as Junius says, "to instruct the throne in the language of truth."—Mrs. H. B. Stowe.

Respectable Gambling.

The position of the buyer and seller of imagined shares of stocks which he never saw, and of whose existence he only knows by parity of reasoning, has no similarity with that of those dealers. He destroys true value, by introducing elements as false as himself into all calculations. Now, lies always fail.

In natural vengeance against such people, there has been a general cry that we need legislation against "time bargains" in stock. This cry, alas! only shows people's ignorance of what they talk about. At the present moment the statute of Massachusetts regarding such bargains is in these words:—

"Every contract, written or oral, for the sale of a certificate or other evidence of debt due from the United States, or a separate State, or of any stocks, or any share or interest in the stock of a bank, company, city, or village, incorporated under a law of the United States, shall be void unless the party contracting to sell or transfer the same is, at the time of making the contract, the owner or assignee thereof, or authorized by the owner or assignee or his agent, to sell or transfer the certificate or other evidence of debt, share, or interest so contracted for."

The statute of New York was identical with this, excepting in verbal expression, until 1858. In that year this statute was repealed, and another substituted confirming the validity of time contracts. Our readers know very well that in neither State has the prohibition by laws or its permission had any appreciable effect in modifying the practice.

Such statutes are, and always will be, worthless in effect. No such statute will succeed until based on a principle of morals. The community cannot separate dealings in stocks from dealings in cotton, corn, or in magazines, and try the stock vendor by one law and the cotton vendor by another.

No. Let the community take the tone which some communities have been enough, honorable enough, and chivalrous enough to take. Let it show, and in a thousand ways it can show, that he who produces, or in indirect ways aids the producer, is the man of honor; that he who gambles, or grows rich as a parasite without producing, is a man disgraced: let the public show this at Newport and Saratoga; on the exchange and in church; let mothers show it as they regulate the society of their children; let bankers show it as they select their customers; let girls show it when they choose their partners, and manufacturing companies when they choose their directors: and then, and not till then, will it be time to talk loudly about the statutes which shall govern gambling;—when we can make the same statute govern the stock market, the faro table, the beef market, the corn market, the leather market, the market of exchange, and the ladies' fair.—Rev. E. E. Hale, in OLD AND NEW for November.

Relieving Choked Cattle.

An animal becoming choked with any hard substance that cannot pass the gullet, harsh measures should never be used until all others have failed.

The practice of placing a block against one side of the throat and endeavoring to break the structure with a mallet, as is sometimes practiced is simply brutal. One of the simplest and, at the same time, most efficacious remedies is to give a half pint of lard oil or melted lard, by drawing out the animal's tongue, raising the head, and administering from a thick bottle. This lubricates the gullet, sickens the stomach, relaxes the muscles of the throat, and in coughing the lodged
