A Portuguese Festa.

It was a "festa" - a holiday - and the peasants were all in their holiday dresses...

The women wore their peculiar peasant jewelry of ancient Moorish design on festa days only...

Up among the mountains, some kind of "dancer" is danced, that is, "a pas de deux" or "pas de trois"...

Often, on a holiday evening, the villagers assemble to listen to temporary singing, one had will challenge another...

There is, of course, as in Italian extempore dancing, some "pas de deux" or "pas de trois"...

It is most to be supposed that this feat is quite so difficult as might appear...

The shepherd lad, keeping his flock on the hill, will serenade his friend across the valley...

Moreover practice makes perfect, and this art of singing is to be heard all day...
