

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 9, 1874. The decision of Judge Benbow in the case of the U. S. v. Sanborn, published yesterday, will be perceived as practically a decision that Mr. Sanborn et al under the celebrated Sanborn contracts with the Treasury Department obtained money in a lawful way which was due and payable by virtue of a law...

Wrecks and Throughbreds.

Thoroughbred is a term given animal descended from parents which both belong to the same recognized breed. A breed is a gradual growth of a class of animals which possess some well distinguishing points or characteristics. Its perfection is arrived at by a course of skillful breeding of selected animals, each chosen for the special purpose of making more distinctly some desired characteristic. This course is persevered in until each animal is able to reproduce itself exactly and infallibly, and the characteristics of the class of animals are indelibly fixed so that each young animal produced is a type of its class.

A Report.

A paragraph is going the rounds of the papers that an invention for water-proofing clothing, make it "hold water like a pail," has been brought out in Springfield. We guess the invention is not a new one. About ten years ago a Hartford sporting man was bit to the tune of $100 by just such an arrangement. He had never heard of the trick of water-proofing cloth, but the chap who took him in had and "laid" to him on the scientific discovery. He sent a pocket handkerchief by mail to the firm of Cowles & Co., then on Courland St., with the request that they would water-proof one-half of the handkerchief, leaving the other half in its natural state.

A Juvenile Wanderer.

A telegram from Dayton, Ohio, states that a lad about fifteen years of age who said that his name is Allewatt was taken in charge of by a police officer of that city on the evening 18th inst., while engaged in the act of trying to pawn a valuable gold watch. Allewatt says that his parents reside in New York City; that he ran away from home with a miniature company about two years ago, and that he has since that time been traveling over the country, but has never written his family, or heard directly from any of its members; that he some time since lost his situation, and since then has been obliged to earn with his baggage and jewelry, piece by piece; and, having determined to go home to his parents, he was endeavoring to sell his watch for the purpose of raising the means. He was held until references he gave in Cincinnati could be heard from.

A Bark Attacked by a Whale.

The bark Kate Williams, Captain Hale, of the regular line between Boston and Bayal, which arrived at Boston on Friday last, had a remarkable escape on her passage. The Boston Journal thus describes the incident: "About seven o'clock one morning a sea man aloft cried out that there was a whale on the watch. Captain Hale stepped to the quarter, and almost immediately could have laid his hand upon the upper jaw of a sperm whale which had paid an unwelcome visit to the vessel. It was a cow whale about sixty feet long, which had set upon them, and had struck the vessel a little further under the Kate Williams would probably never have been heard from after leaving Fayette. As it was the vessel received a pretty good shock, and lost a portion of her mizen channels. The monster had seen her unexpected enemy, and discovered her, for she immediately sunk and came up with great force right at the vessel's stern. Captain Hale thinks her mouth measured at least fifteen feet, and her under jaw was felt to scrape the bottom of the vessel as she glided swiftly away from her unexpected enemy. The whale fared as bad as the bark, no doubt, for the quarter deck was covered with pieces of the leviathan's outer skin and the mud that is found between it and the tougher hide. The Kate Williams was sailing rapidly at the time, and in about fifteen minutes she was on her beam ends. While the latter could be seen, she appeared swimming about looking for the vessel and evidently in a rage.
