MOONSHINE. BY G. L. RAYMOND.

The hills rang back our parting jest : The dear, dear day was over: -The sun was low beyond the west: We walked home through the clover. Our words were gay; but though astray The parting kept regretted,-"The old, old way," it seemed to say : "The suns are always setting !" Then gazing back with longing soon, At once my step grew bolder:

For, bright and new, I spled the moon, Just over my right shoulder. I turned about and bade her look; We were not superstitious; We joked about that shining hock, Bright bait, and skies auspicious. We joked ; butch! I thought with wee, The bright bait lures me only, And like the rest is doomed to go. And leave life dark and lonely

"Pastyon horizon, earth is strewn

With broken moons," I told her ;

"Each bore a bright hope too each moon,

When over my right shoulder." | "Alas' to trust in each new light A man were moonstruck surely, A lunatic! We laughed outright, And then walked on demarely. But soon I spled, my moon beside The old round out the new one! I thought, "Would hope fulfilled abide, Splite every change, a true one?

And took her hand to hold her;

'Ah, love !" she sighed, "to-night the moon Is over my right shoulder." From OLD AND NEW for Moy.

What would she say ?"- lasked her soon,

THE HERO WOMAN A Remance of the Revolution.

In a thick wood not more than half a mile from the Schuylkill, there stood in the time or the Revolution, a quaint old fabric, built of mingled logs and stone, and encircled by a pallasaded wall. how, in our childhood, the term of a year appeared interminable, and we thought we could compress into that great space almost any amount of work and play? But as we get olders how is it that, with all our industry time seems too short for the work we take in hand? We become engrossed that holy days and holidays are alike invaded; and after all is done, how much is left unfinished, how many schemes remain untried? "It is a solemn thought and feeling NO. 47. connected with middle life," says the late eloquent F. W. Robertson, that 'life's last business is begun in earnest; and it is then, midway between The Norristown Herald exhumes the cradle and the grave, that a man
