The air is generally bland, always pure, salubrious, elastic, light, and owing to the great extent of water surface, of qualified and proper humidity. During the summer there is a regular trade wind from the south west (a sea breeze) springing up from about 10 o'clock, A. M., and blowing more or less fresh until nearly supset, and occasionally later. At night the land trade wind from the northward prevails. After son-rise, the mornings are usually warm until the sea breeze commences. Very few calm days occur during summer. Nights are always cool, refreshing and invigorating, with rare exceptions; and in the winter frequently clear and bright when the day is otherwise. It is always warm and pleasant in the sunshine during any part of the winter.
