The worst case of dispensia can be curred without the least particle of medicine, simply by eating nothing that it is more profitable to allow that price than it would be to have it hosked for nothing late in the season. This, in our opinion, is the best way to meet the difficulty. Let farmers become duly impressed with the importance of husking their corn and securing their fodder early—say soon after the first of October—and then no more think of delaying it a month or two longer, than they would think of postponing the cutting of a field of grass that was in the proper condition on the first of July, until the first of August. Will farmers any that it is impossible to hire labor enough to busk it thus promptly until the first of August. Will farmers any that it is impossible to hire labor enough to do their haying and harvesting, and they can use for husking and shrinking, and freezing and harvesting, and they can use for husking and shrinking, and freezing and thawing, only in a less degree. In this he put the pieces of steak previously pounded, but to their surprise did not put a particle of butter in the frying-pan, and did not salt his steak. He allowed the steak to meerly glaze over, and then turned it quickly to the other side, turning it several times in this manner, until it was done. Four minuner, until it was done. Four minutes were not employed on this operation, but a jusier steak was never eaten. It was, when done, laid on the platter, previously warmed, and was buttered and salted and set a moment in the bot oven. Allowing the steak to beat but a moment on each side, helped it to retain all its sweet juices, and putting the salt on at the last moment after it was on the platter, drew out its juices.

In our articles last fall plaus were suggested for securing the etalks before they were injured, all having mere or less merit. We thought that if farmers could not so arrange their work as to husk their own corn as soon as the stalks are sufficiently cured for housing or stacking, they had better follow the old fashioned system of topping that portion of the stalks as soon as cured. Save the better part of the fodder in its best condition.
