"There is a secret about plum raising."
We have discovered it in traveling over the country. We never visited a large plum orchard in our life that we did not find plenty of fruit. And we never visited any place with eight or ten trees, and found a good crop of the fruit. Now, these facts set us thinking? and the result of our thoughts is this; that it is very say to have all the plums you want to eat and self. The secret connected with plum raising is to plant plenty of trees, so as to give fruit to the curculio and to yourself also. If you plant fifty or a hundred trees, you will have fruit enough for everybody. Every such orchard that we have ever visited had plenty of ripe fruit. Some even complained that the curculio did not thin out the fruit enough—that the trees were overloaded. So we say to our readers, if you plant filty or a bundred trees, you will have fruit enough for everybody. Every such orchard that we have ever visited had plenty of ripe fruit. Some even complained that the curculio did not thin out the fruit enough—that the trees were overloaded. So we say to our readers, if you plant filty or a bundred trees, were overloaded. So we say to our readers, if you plant plants at all, plant fifty or not handred trees—then you will be sure to have all the fruit you want, and it is one of the most proflathe crops faised.

Is commenting upon the failure of a newspaper manager, the St. Louis Globs tells a plain truth in the following words:

"The business of journalism will continue to be an inviting field for experiments to those who have a large amount of egotism. A man, who, having edited a newspaper until he was forty, should suddenly announce himself as a lawyer, would be regarded as a fool by the legal profession; and yet we often hear of lawyers of forty making sudden prefensions to journalism.

Is commenting upon the failure of a newspaper that was unable to walk, in a chair before the biazing fire on the hearth, secared the windows and locked the door. About an inour afterwards a Mr. Sipes, a neighbor, remarked a peculiar smell in the air, but not being able to trace its origin, he proceeded in his work of fooding his stock, to be interrupted shortly after by notleing them. and yet we often hear of lawyers of forty making sudden prefensions to journalism. There is an idea that the business of editing requires no apprenticeship: that editors come forth from law offices and colleges and all efforts to be of assistance to the victims within were fulle. The theory of the fire is not in America to-day a single journalist of national reputation who has not devoted more time and more had work to his profession, than, with equal fitness and application, would have made him a great lawyer or a good doctor. And yet ninety out of every hundred men you meet on the street way for the room where they had crept, instinct on the street way for the profession of the room where they had crept, instinct on the street way.
