What a miserable subterfuge," said Belle, blushing brightly. "He was glad of a pretext, and I'll tell him so."

"That leaves us," said Holcombe, "ten ladies and—counting rapidly—'eleven of the sterner sex.'"

"I'll be No. 21, the superfluous man," called Creighton, from Miss Deneen's side.

"I have done my best," said Curly, "but I don't think I will go."

"You see, Miss Ruth, the polls are open and betting's lively. You'll have to go to see Kuggles who was standing near me."

"I cannot decide yet. I will let you know in the morning. Now I must go to my mathematics lesson."
