Within the last ten years the progress of discovery in every department of knowledge has made a new work of reference an imperative want.

The movement of political affairs has kept pace with the discoveries of science, and their mutual application to the industrial and useful arts, and the convenience and refinement of social life.—Great wars and unescoping revolutions have occurred, involving mational changes of peculiar moment. The civil war of our own construct which was at the length of the the state columns of the old work appeared, has happily been ended, and a new course of commercial and industrial activity has been consensed.

Large accessings to our geographical knewledge have been made by the internityable explanate of Atrica.

Africa.

The great political revolutions of the last-founds, with the customic result of the laper of time, have brought into view a multitude or new men, whose manus are in every one's month, and of whose fives every one is cortical to know the particulars. Great feating have been sought and important slegge maintained, of which the details are as yet preserved only in the newspapers or in the transient combinations of the day, but which coghinose to publications of the day, but which cought now to take their place in permanent and automatic his bory.

In preparing the present edition for the press, it has no origingly been the sim of the editors to bring down the instruction to the latest possible dates, and to Turnish an accurate account of the most recent discoveries in science, of every first production in literature, and of the newest inventions in the practical arts, as well as to give a succent and arising recent of the progress a political and his-
