The Decoy Trank

A new device to facilitate robberies at railway depots has lately been successfully practiced on the public. Some ingenious person, it appears, has hit upon a way by which a trunk can be made to steal another trunk, and a portmanteau to annex to its fellow. In the adventures of Sinbad the Sailor we are told how the merchants got at the precious stones in the valley of the diamonds. The merchants threw down pieces of meat, which fell on and absorbed the diamonds; the eagles swooped on the pieces of meat and flew with them to WHOLE NO. 1277 the upper air; the merchants shot the engles with arrows and thus got the meat, the eagles, and the jewels.
