A NEGRO'S STORY.

The colonel of our regiment was an officer of great capacity and remarkable promise. Yet he was with all a cold, stern man...

"Never mind me," was the quick retort. "Attend to this one." Hill was wounded in the breast, and I saw at once that it was a dangerous and a doubtful case...

"Well, Hill," said I as he entered, "what can I do for you this morning?" "I wish to go on the sick list, if you please, sir," he replied in a quiet tone...

"I am broken down, doctor," he answered. "I have been on guard for five successive nights." "The doctor you have!" I exclaimed in astonishment...

"Very good," I said. "You can remain at your quarters for two days, and consider yourself on the sick list for that time." "Thank me, he went away."

"What is the matter with Hill?" he asked. "He is broken down by the unusual fatigue which he has been subjected to by the service."

"That's all he said, doctor?" "He added," I replied after hesitating a moment, "that he would gladly die to serve you."

A single shot, followed by a loud shriek, told us that one of my men, Bradley, was hurt. He proclaimed his agony with a loud wailing cry over his back and forehead...

"Poor fellow!" said the doctor, "shot in the bladder. I am afraid it is fatal." "Oh, my God!" said Bradley, "a dead man!"

"I am afraid so, sir," I do not see much chance of recovery. "I have never merited his displeasure. Heaven knows," he added, and I saw his features tremble with pain...

"What is the matter with Hill?" he asked. "He is broken down by the unusual fatigue which he has been subjected to by the service."

"That's all he said, doctor?" "He added," I replied after hesitating a moment, "that he would gladly die to serve you."
