

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7, 1876. DEMOCRATIC CONVERTS FROM THE REPUBLICAN PARTY—WHO THEY ARE—THE SECRET OF THEIR CONVERSION—THEIR PARTISAN EXPLANATION HIS FAULTLESS INCOME RETURNS.

The organ of the Democracy, in New York City, publishes, with flaming headlines, a list of names, some fifty in number, of gentlemen who, according to the World, were the leading members of what was known as the "Independent" party, and who, in the name of "liberalism," and with much other fine-sounding language, had been forced to desert that party on account of its misadministration of national affairs. A glance at the list shows that the names are all well known to all, and give in a word, in most cases, the reason why they are ex-officio holders, who were forced to improve the service. Let us glance at a few of the names. At the head appears that of Charles Francis Adams, and a little further down those of two of his sons. It seems to be crowding matters a little to mention all three when the father's name would have carried equal weight, until now, the country was assured that that gentleman was blessed with so many heirs to his fortune. Charles Francis has accepted the Democratic nomination for Governor of Massachusetts, and shows whatever influence he may be able to wield in favor of that party, the consideration being, it is generally understood, a promise of something better in the event of Tilden's success. Next in order comes ex-Governor Curtin, of Pennsylvania, in whom a more disappointed of those who can hardly be found. Then David A. Wells, the noted free-trader, who prepared for Mr. Morrison, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the present Congress, the so-called Morrison Tariff Bill; a bill so clearly in the interest of foreign manufacturers and New York importers, and so positively against the interests of our home industries that its bare introduction in the House of Representatives called forth such a general outpouring of indignation that both the author and introducer were forced to abandon it, or at least postpone any further efforts to secure its passage until a further accession of power by the Democratic forces. Next, Gideon Wells, a name long ago written upon the political tombstone. B. Grant Brown, who was so overwhelmingly re-elected four years ago. Geo. W. Julian, who left the Republican party because it refused to provide a soft place not only for himself but for every one of his numerous relatives. Then follows a list of names which are, among them, the names of those who were forced only to retire from the command of the Army of the Potomac but from active service altogether. Since that event he has naturally been much offended with the Republican party, and has on a number of occasions vented his spleen not only upon the party but upon the officers who succeeded him in command, and who carried the war to a successful termination in spite of Democratic assertions that such a result was impossible. The list closes after another bunch of unknown names with that of Frank Blair, who deserted the Republicans because, in the interests of economy, they legislated him out of one office and failed to provide him with another.

The Emperor of Germany has just written the following letter to Mr. Tilden, congratulating him on his election to the Presidency of the United States.

My Dear Field Marshal General:—The anniversary of your birth is celebrated by me with the same interest and respect as I should have shown to the anniversary of the birth of any other man of your rank and position. I am glad to see that you have lived so long, and that you have been able to witness the progress of the German Empire, and the progress of the United States. Col. Campbell's record as a politician will be re-examined. Heared in the school of Jackson Democracy, he was voted in 1844 for Polk and Dallas. In 1848, however, he voted for Fremont, and he therefore gave his vote against the party which sought its extension.

Col. Campbell's record as a politician will be re-examined. Heared in the school of Jackson Democracy, he was voted in 1844 for Polk and Dallas. In 1848, however, he voted for Fremont, and he therefore gave his vote against the party which sought its extension. In 1852 he voted again for the Free Soil candidates, Van Buren and Adams. His residence in the South had shown him the evils of slavery, and he therefore gave his vote against the party which sought its extension. General James A. Beaver, of Centre, then said: Mr. President, I move you that in recognition of the eminent services rendered to our country by Gen. Hartranft and Col. J. M. Campbell, and in consideration of the faithful discharge of their duties as public officers, they be unanimously re-nominated as candidates of the Republican party for the offices of Auditor General and Surveyor General.

General James A. Beaver, of Centre, then said: Mr. President, I move you that in recognition of the eminent services rendered to our country by Gen. Hartranft and Col. J. M. Campbell, and in consideration of the faithful discharge of their duties as public officers, they be unanimously re-nominated as candidates of the Republican party for the offices of Auditor General and Surveyor General. In the platform of the party the following resolution was also unanimously passed: "Resolved, That in John F. Hartranft and Col. Jacob M. Campbell, our nominees for re-election to the offices of Auditor General and Surveyor General, we recognize brave soldiers who led and shared with our gallant 'Boys in Blue' in the sanguinary struggle against rebels in arms, and who have since proved themselves to be competent, faithful and upright officers in times of peace, and we confidently commend them to the suffrage of a people who have not forgotten to be grateful to the defenders of the life of the Nation, and who love to honor those who exposed themselves in toil and trial, in camp and bivouac, on the weary march and in the imminent peril of battle, that the people might be safe, and the country free and united."

THE VETERAN OF THE PRUSSIAN ARMY.

On the 15th of August—the Saint Napoleon—Marshal Wrangel celebrated the 80th anniversary of the day on which he received his first commission in the Prussian army. In 1796 Frederick William II. was king, and the Prussian army had been defeated at Jena. General Bonaparte had just achieved European fame by his first Italian campaign, and Washington was president of the United States. Jena was still ten years off, and Waterloo six weeks.

If any man hauls down the American flag, shoot him on the spot—John A. Dix, in 1861. In principle the Democratic party at the South is hauling down the flag, and is doing it in a manner that is disgraceful to the nation.
